HOOVER OFFICE COSTS $391,657 OVER COOLIDGE

Has More Autos and Secretaries.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 27.—[Special.]—The executive office and maintenance of the White House are costing the taxpayers an average of $97,914 more a year under the Hoover administration than under the last four years of Coolidge and $184,094 more than under the Harding-Coolidge term.

With four $10,000 a year secretaries, compared with Mr. Coolidge's one at $7,500; with eleven automobiles, compared with President Wilson's three, and with numerous other amplifications of the establishment, President Hoover boosted the White House expenditures above the half million mark for the first time in the history of the republic and was well on his way to the $600,000 mark when he was hit by the economy wave.

As a result, the 1933 White House appropriations aggregate $80,320 less than the 1932 expenditures and are the lowest of the Hoover régime, though still more than $50,000 higher than Coolidge's high water mark.

Twice What Wilson Spent.

The Hoover occupancy of the White House has cost $391,657 more than the last four years of Coolidge, $736,377 more than the Harding-Coolidge term and more than twice as much annually as the last year of the Wilson régime.

Beginning with the current fiscal year and running back to 1921, the executive office and White House expenditures follow:

Hoover administration:

Year.	Total.
1931	527,119
1930	513,120
Total	$2,114,217

Year.	Total.
1928	442,960
1927	429,460
1926	427,960

Year.	Total.
1925	$ 390,910
1923	318,480
Total	$1,377,840

These are not the complete expenditures of the White House and executive office for the reason that some of the items that go to make up the total are concealed in appropriations for other governmental agencies. There are numerous employés, for example, who are carried on the pay rolls of the departments.

One of the cuts in White House appropriations for this year was in the customary $25,000 allowance for the President's traveling and entertainment expenses which were reduced to $20,000, although Mr. Hoover in his last December budget had asked the usual $25,000. Mr. Hoover has drawn all of this allowance each year. Mr. Coolidge drew $22,815 in 1925, $24,575 in 1926, $18,440 in 1927, $22,144 in 1928. Mr. Harding drew only a fraction of the allowance.

Costs Under Coolidge.

President Coolidge began his administration with one secretary at $7,500 a year and an office staff costing $85,260. Appropriations for contingent expenses which include stationery, record books, telegrams, telephones, automobiles, garage, etc., were $35,000; printing and binding, $2,800; traveling expenses and entertainment for the President, $25,000; care and maintenance of the White House, $110,000, and White House police, $87,400.

In his last year these items were one secretary, $10,000, his salary having been raised by congress; office staff, $86,480; printing and binding, $2,800; contingent expenses, $35,000; traveling and entertainment, $25,000; care and maintenance of the White House, $102,000; White House police, $85,900.

In Mr. Hoover's first year these items ran three secretaries, $30,000; office staff, $93,520; contingent expenses, $35,000; printing and binding, $2,700; traveling and entertainment, $25,000; care and maintenance of the White House, $166,000; White House police, $85,900.

Police Charge Transferred.

The next year the item for the White House police disappeared. Investigation disclosed that this important former charge against the White

45,000 WATCH GREAT TRIBUNE RING SPECTACLE

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

There was uproar by night in the great arena of Soldiers' field last evening when the German amateur champion fighters won the first three bouts of their tournament with the Chicagoland Golden Gloves team and the Americans came back to earn a tie, four bouts to four, in the greatest amateur fight show ever produced. There were 45,000 patrons, a record crowd, surpassing even the attendance at last year's inaugural meet of the international competition sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The gate receipts amounted to $60,000 gross.

It Was a Great Spectacle.

As a spectacle the show was one of the most impressive ever staged in Chicago. Myriads of people were massed in the huge arena under weather conditions never surpassed. After the rainstorm of the previous evening which necessitated a one-day postponement the air turned clear and cool, but not too cool for a great outdoor assemblage.

When the lights were on the boxing stage and dimmed on the edges of the field the multitude was in shadow, but between the bouts the ring of lights turned on brought into clear outline a great amphitheater of people tier on tier to the top of the great structure, and all in happy holiday mood.

German Heavyweight Wins.

The Germans tied the score in the final bout of the eight when Dave Barry, famous for his unconventional counting in the Tunney-Dempsey fight on the same grounds, stopped the bout between Heinrich Kohlhaas, the German heavyweight, and Duffy Dvonch of the U. S. Naval Training station at Great Lakes, Ill., awarding the verdict to the German boy by a technical knockout.

The end came in the second round after Dvonch had been knocked to the floor by a right hand slam on the head. He had been down twice in the first round and obviously was no match for Kohlhaas, who weighed 204 pounds to Dvonch's 186. The third knockdown spilled him at the side of the ring and his left arm tangled in the lower ropes as he tried to rise.

Dvonch Out on Feet.

Releasing himself with a wild wrench, he stumbled across the ring and plunged of his own weight on to the ropes on the other side. Barry then waved Kohlhaas away and led Dvonch to his corner.

The American sailor, a grotesque figure teetering on rounded heels, his body disfigured by a gallery of tattooed designs acquired during his service on the China station, was too game for his own good and too dazed at the moment to realize what was going on. He would have continued the fight if Barry had let him, but he was led to his corner, and the meet which brought the Germans 4,000 miles to fight ended on amicable sporting terms in a standoff which neither side could dispute.

Crowd Near Capacity.

The crowd almost filled the fight arena, packing the 21,000 reserved seats in the wooden bowl erected in the southerly end of the amphitheater which sold at from $1.10 to $3.30 as well as the 55 cent reserved sections in the permanent concrete structure.

There were no disputes over any of the decisions, and the only discordant note was some rather gay mockery directed at Referee Barry, all reminiscent of his 14 count over Tunney. Mr. Barry's public delights to remember that incident by chanting a count up to 14 on his public appearances and topping that off with a round of boos and jeers, the whole effect being not unlike certain college yells.

Phagan Knocks Out Campe.

There were two knockouts and the first was one of the most authentic that any fighter ever suffered in a ring and lived to tell of. The victim was Erich Campe, a young German police cadet from Berlin, recently graduated to the patrol force, who will step into a uniform and begin hammering the sidewalks with his heels when he returns home.

Campe was hit on the chin with a straight right in the first round of his fight with Johnny Phagan, the colored welterweight of the Golden Gloves team. He had been hit a similar punch, but not as hard, a few seconds before and was standing stiff-

3 Million for Chicago Relief Loaned by U.S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 27.—[Special.]—The Reconstruction Finance corporation today granted a 3 million dollar relief loan to Illinois, of which half or more will go to meet the critical situation in Chicago.

The loan fell far short of the expectations Chicago set in store for aid from the government's gigantic 3 billion 800 million dollar finance corporation and even 7 million dollars short of the application of Gov. L. L. Emmerson for an initial payment of 10 million dollars of the 45 million dollars Illinois is entitled to under the new relief bill.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis [Dem., Ill.] immediately registered an emphatic protest with the board of directors of the finance corporation against the meagerness of the loan. Despite the fact that congress intended loans under the legislation to apply only to general relief, Senator Lewis expressed fear bankers would seize all of Chicago's share under an agreement through which, he said, they advanced loans to the city against expected aid from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Corporation Issues Statement.

While Illinois was first under the wire since President Hoover signed the relief bill releasing direct federal aid for states, the corporation made the small loan to Illinois the vehicle for a statement declaring it expected states to meet their needs to the greatest possible extent from their own public and private sources, calling on the corporation only as a last resort.

In granting the loan to Illinois, officials said the emergency situation in some parts of that state as outlined by Gov. Emmerson made quick action necessary.

While no definite promises were made officials indicated that the $3,000,000 had been allocated to Illinois at this time to meet the state's emergency for one month. Without committing themselves specifically, they intimated that an additional loan is to be granted as soon as the board works out a definite line of procedure and completes a survey of the relief task before it.

Lewis Urges Fixed Sum.

Senator Lewis protested to the corporation against the adoption of a hand to mouth policy with respect to advances to the states for relief purposes. He urged the board of directors to agree upon a fixed sum to be loaned to each state monthly, based on exact needs in their various communities.

Because of the crisis confronting Chicago the board of directors acted on the petition of the governor without waiting for its new chairman, former Senator Atlee Pomerene, to come to Washington and complete reorganization of the corporation to meet the vast financing task that lies ahead.

Recognizes Local Emergency.

"In making funds available under the new act for the relief of destitution the board desires to say that the corporation will expect all states to meet their needs to the greatest extent possible from their public and private sources, and call upon the corporation only as a last resort to supplement their own efforts," the finance corporation announced.

TRUSTEES TOSS OUT OLD LEVIES, VOTE ECONOMY

Board Stands 7 to 3 for the Cut.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The school board reduced its 1932 tax levies yesterday by an even $15,000,000. The board first rescinded the levies which were passed last March 23 and which the city council ever since has refused to approve, and then substituted the reduced levies. The old levies totaled $76,163,364; the new ones total $61,163,364. This is a cut of 19.69 per cent.

The city council is scheduled to adopt the reduced levies at its meeting today. Immediately thereafter the school board in a recessed session will take action to issue its 1932 tax anticipation warrants through which the trustees hope to finance the operation of the schools.

Meet Demands of Bankers.

The board's action in trimming the tax levies met the demands of Chicago bankers at a conference with Mayor Cermak on Monday. After the conference the mayor announced that the bankers had promised a loan of $2,245,000 to pay the teachers and other school employés for the last half of March, on condition that the school board would trim expenses at least 15 million dollars.

The pay day, it was announced at that time, would be today or tomorrow. It may be decided at a meeting today between bankers and city officials whether the salary loan will be forthcoming. A complication which developed after the Monday conference was the decision of the Illinois Supreme court on Tuesday upholding the validity of "N. S. F." checks as a means of paying teachers' salaries. The banks have held that these checks weaken the security of tax anticipation warrants.

Vote 7 to 3 for Cut.

The $15,000,000 reduction made in the tax levies yesterday is the first cut by the school board in several years. The vote for the reduction was 7 to 3, with Trustee Carter Blatchford absent.

The three who opposed the tax decrease are Trustees Joseph P. Savage, John A. English, and James A. Hemingway. All were appointees of the former mayor. Hemingway is chairman of the board's finance committee.

The trustees who voted for lower taxes are H. Wallace Caldwell, William D. Mc Junkin, Mrs. Helen Hefferan, Robert F. Carr, Ernst Buehler, Orville J. Taylor, and Lewis E. Myers, president of the board. Trustee Buehler offered the resolution to cancel the old tax levies and Trustee Caldwell presented the resolution to substitute the reduced ones.

Only Two Levies Escape.

The building fund levy was trimmed $13,000,000, the educational fund levy, $1,750,000; the textbook fund levy, $150,000; and the playground fund levy, $100,000. Only the levies for pensions and for bonds and interest escaped the knife. The following table shows the levies decided upon yesterday in comparison with those adopted last March 23:

Fund—	Old levy.	New levy.
Building	15,514,707	2,514,707
Textbook	611,339	461,339
Playground	329,599	229,599
Pensions	1,311,339	1,311,339
Bond redemption	7,253,334	7,253,334
Totals	$76,163,364	$61,163,364

The $15,000,000 slash in tax levies necessarily implies a reduction of at least the same amount in the expenditures of the board. The report of the $100,000 survey of the schools made by Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia university asserted that $15,000,000 could be saved without impairing the educational service or reducing teachers' salaries.

28% Trim from Last Year.

In comparison with the board's tax levies for last year the trustees ordered a reduction of 28.2 per cent, which they claimed is the largest made by any local government. A tabulation of this year's and last year's levies follows:

Fund—	1931 levy.	1932 levy.
Building	21,172,636	2,514,707
Textbook	1,457,267	461,339
Playground	912,587	229,599
Bond redemption	4,228,888	7,253,334
Pensions	912,587	1,311,339

Bonus Army Chief Averts Martial Law

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 27.—[Special.]—A threat of martial law for the District of Columbia was averted temporarily tonight when Walter W. Waters, bonus army leader, announced that he would submit to the demand that he remove 2,000 veterans from government property desired by the treasury for construction purposes.

Immediately prior to the Waters announcement President Hoover had discussed with cabinet officers plans for ousting the veterans from their lodgings on Pennsylvania avenue property where several of the government's huge new buildings are to be built.

The White House meeting, attended by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, and Ferry K. Heath, assistant treasury secretary, was called suddenly after the bonus army had refused to budge from the government property and district officials had declined to order police to enforce eviction orders.

Seek Mitchell's Opinion.

Following the cabinet conference President Hoover directed Attorney General William D. Mitchell to submit a report as to what civil steps could be taken by the government to evict the veterans from government property, where they were blocking the construction program. The attorney general was also instructed to determine if district officials had the power to order the police to forcibly evict the veterans, the district officials having pleaded that they had no authority over government property.

The Waters decision to peacefully retire in the face of White House intervention and the threat of army force climaxed a week of rapid developments, in which the bonus forces admittedly including many communists had been constantly bickering with local police and district officials. All efforts of the police to force the veterans to abandon their lodgings on the government property had been met with laughter and rebellion. On four occasions in a week the police and district officials set "zero hours" for the bonus army to move, only to back down when the critical hour arrived, leaving victory with the veterans.

Defiant During Day.

The latest brush was this morning, when the Waters forces brusquely refused to leave Pennsylvania avenue and 3d street in the face of a threat of force by police under Pelham D. Glassford, Washington chief of police. When the zero hour came the veterans defied the police to do their worst. Glassford, himself an honorary member of the bonus army, decided not to use force without a written order. He so notified the district commissioners. They decided not to use force, and so notified the White House, taking the position that the White House should call on the army for its rough work.

Angered by refusal of the district authorities to act, President Hoover called his cabinet conference. It is asserted that the President expressed displeasure at the manner in which the local police and officials had handled the situation.

It was reported that the war department had prepared two plans for dealing with the bonus army in event the White House called on it for action. One would result in a declaration of martial law and the appointment of a provost marshal to maintain order. The other would call for immediate internment of all the veterans in a camp, where they would be guarded until they left the capital.

STOCK PRICES JUMP IN MOST ENERGETIC RALLY THIS SUMMER

New York, July 27.—[Special.]—A rally in the stock market, the strongest of the summer, carried prices forward in the last hours of trading today from fractions to nearly 5 points.

The rise followed an advance in the price for wheat which attracted attention just before 2 o'clock and which was the second substantial gain to be registered in the grain market in two days.

The market leaders showed the way, with Steel common moving up to 28 and the preferred shares gaining more than 4¾ points, while popular issues like American Telephone and Telegraph, J. I. Case, Auburn, and others shared in the gain.

As the rally got under way it was evident that shorts were running to cover in several issues and this, of course, contributed to the advance in prices.

Outstanding strong spots and the closing gains were as follows: American Can, up 2⅛; American Telephone, up 4¼; Consolidated Gas, up 3⅜; Auburn Automobile, up 4⅛; Union Pacific, up 3⅞; New York Central, up 1; Atchison, up 2½; Case Threshing Machine, up 2⅛; Allied Chemical, up 2½; Westinghouse Electric, up 1¼; National Biscuit, up 1⅜; American Tobacco, up 4 points, and General Electric, up 1⅝.

Joseph Pollack, 49 years old, was shot and fatally wounded by his wife, Dorothy, 26 years old, last evening in their apartment at 1936 West Garfield boulevard. Pollack was said to be a real estate dealer with an office at 4601 South Ashland avenue, but police declared that he was also connected with the south side beer and alcohol syndicate.

Mrs. Pollack shot her husband in the right eye with her own revolver. He died shortly after reaching the South Town hospital. More than $500 in pay checks of a packing company and $169 in cash were found in Pollack's pockets.

Wife Sheds Few Tears.

At the New City station, where she was held for the inquest this morning, Mrs. Pollack shed a few tears, but hastily powdered them away when photographers sought her picture. She said she shot Pollack in self-defense when he attacked her with a knife. No knife was found in the apartment and Mrs. Victoria Schultz, a witness to the shooting, said she saw no knife but that Pollack was walking towards his wife in a menacing manner, with his hand in his pocket, when she shot him.

Mrs. Pollack said she had suspected her husband of being friendly with another woman. Unable to reach her husband at his office yesterday she and Mrs. Schultz went in search of him without success. When she returned home she found her husband there and a quarrel resulted which ended in the shooting.

"Would Do It Again."

"I loved him and I'm sorry," said Mrs. Pollack at one time; but again, talking to a relative, she burst out: "I'd do it again!" She was garbed in a modish white sports dress, white turban, and summer furs.

A representative of the law firm of Hoffman & Daugherty, which has represented several women in murder cases, visited Mrs. Pollack in her cell and Attorney Hoffman later announced that his firm had been engaged in the case.

A Cop Helps Clean House, and What a Help He Is!

Policeman Martin Condon, assigned to the Gresham station, gave his wife a hand yesterday as she started housecleaning in their home at 8014 Princeton avenue. In turning a mattress off a bed he forgot that he had left his revolver under the pillow. It went off, inflicting a flesh wound in his leg.

it passed its $90,180,000 budget and its supporting tax levy of $76,163,000 that it would be unable to finance its appropriations. The forecast proved true; the board has been unable to borrow any money on which to operate the schools.

Warned by Citizens' Group.

More recently the citizens' committee on public expenditures, headed by Fred W. Sargent, told the board that it could not hope to borrow money unless it trimmed its tax levies "$15,000,000 at least." The committee also said that it gave no assurances that money can be had, even if the suggested $15,000,000 were trimmed out of the budget.

That was the chief argument used by the opponents of the tax levy reduction yesterday. Trustee Savage went so far as to assert that if he were a director of a bank he would not purchase board of education warrants, because only 51 per cent of the 1930 taxes have been paid.

Admits Declining Tax Revenue.

"Do you expect that a larger amount of taxes will be paid for 1932?" asked Trustee Caldwell.

"We will be lucky if we get as much tax revenue in 1932 as will be paid this year," replied Savage.

Trustee English argued that the reduction in the tax levy will eventually mean a reduction in wages.

"I'm opposed to that," said English. "I am also opposed to repudiation of contracts [referring to building construction]. We are voting to cut the levy for the benefit of those who have not paid their taxes, not for those who have paid."

"There is no promise of any money for the teachers if we cut the tax levies," said Trustee Hemingway. "This whole resolution is based on misrepresentation.

"The teachers were tricked into aiding a revamping of the taxing machinery of Cook county in the hope and belief that the financial difficulties of the board would thereby be ironed out. They were fooled and they will be deceived if they believe there will be any salaries if this resolution is adopted."

"This reduction in the tax levies," said Trustee Savage, "means that in about three months, when we make up our 1933 budget, we will have to appropriate for all of the reduction we have made in the building fund.

Predicts Future Tax Boost.

"We are telling the taxpayers we will cut $13,000,000 from the building operations in 1932 and then add it to the 1933 taxes. Or it may be worse. We will save $1 in taxes this year and boost taxes $2 next year.

"The reduction means we will get just so much less in taxes, we will have just so much less in tax assets, assuming that the taxes will later be paid. But what will happen will be this:

"We make a tax levy cut now. In three months we will be told that the people cannot pay even as much as our reduced levy. Then there will be a movement to discontinue the high schools and slash the teachers' salaries.

"One of the chief troubles has been that persons with good intentions but no responsibility—outsiders, if you please—have been running the city. I'm for any reduction in expenses we can make without wrecking the school system, but I'll never vote for a cut in the tax levies.

"We made an honest, economical and efficient budget for this year. We reduced our budget a greater amount than any other local government.

"Now we are going to eliminate $13,000,000 from the building fund, when we have contractors' liabilities for more than $10,000,000. These contractors will demand a profit on the work they have done, and damages, and get every dollar they can. They will get millions of dollars in damages.

"I do not know where we will get money to operate the schools. I see no way in the world by which the bankers can supply us money with which to have the schools functioning properly."

Caldwell Tells His Position.

"It is a very serious matter to eliminate $15,000,000 from the tax levies," said Trustee Caldwell, "but I shall vote for it because it is one step in solving our difficulties."

Mr. Caldwell also offered a resolution providing for a school board committee to confer with representatives of other local governments for the purpose of getting the state legislature to adopt a sales tax for the benefit of the schools. He said a modified sales would reduce the taxes on real estate 50 per cent.

This resolution was adopted as well as another one presented by Trustee Caldwell which instructs the school attorney to appeal to the Reconstruction Finance corporation for a loan. Mr. Caldwell said the corporation is considering the question of making loans to school districts. He argued that if it is decided to make the loans the Chicago school board should have an application ready.

Taylor Urges Cut in Levies.

Although every member of the board made a speech, probably the chief argument for the $15,000,000 cut in the tax levies was made by Trustee Taylor. He said:

"We have been told by the bankers that they will be largely influenced by the recommendations of the Sargent committee. The committee has told us that unless the tax levies are reduced at least $15,000,000 no money can be obtained. But they have not promised money if the levies are reduced.

"At the meeting with the bankers last Monday they promised us $2,245,000 for a half month's pay for the school employes after much effort on the part of Mayor Cermak and others. Our tax warrants at present are not marketable.

"The mayor urged the bankers to give the board half a month's pay as a gesture of good will and good faith. The money was obtained, but I am absolutely convinced that it is the last loan unless we reduce the tax levies $15,000,000.

"Our problem is how to open the schools in September, and how to get money to pay the teachers and other employés. I believe the cut in tax levies will eventually be of benefit to the schools."

Indicate Trims in Expense.

No formal action was taken by the board to show how the expenditures will be reduced, but previous committee discussions have indicated the plan.

The $13,000,000 reduction in the building levy will be met by deferring construction on all except four or five of 52 building projects. Expenditures for the World's Fair school and purchase of sites will not be made. It was estimated at the board session yesterday that it will take three or four months to negotiate settlements with contractors on buildings under construction.

The proposed $1,750,000 saving in the educational fund includes one item of about $400,000 which Business Manager Howard P. Savage has recommended. This is to be saved on janitors, janitresses, engineres and firemen in the operation of the school buildings.

Superintendent of Schools Bogan some time ago announced he had adopted a Strayer recommendation which would save $200,000 this year. This is by adding four pupils to the number assigned to each teacher.

Szymczak Seeks a Market.

City Controller M. S. Szymczak left for New York yesterday afternoon in an effort to find a market for school board tax anticipation warrants among eastern banks, investment houses and insurance companies. These warrants draw 6 per cent interest.

The state Supreme court decision upholding the validity of "N. S. F." checks as a means of paying teachers' salaries may interfere with the sale of school warrants, it was said. The "N. S. F." check law is objected to by Chicago banks and bond houses because, they say, it makes the school board's educational fund tax warrants unmarketable.

School Attorney Thomas V. Sullivan said the board would ask for a rehearing in the Supreme court.

Attorneys for teachers' organizations will confer today on their line of action growing out of the court's decision. Thurlow G. Essington, one of the attorneys, discussed the situation with Henry Cutler of the law firm of Chapman & Cutler, security experts, upon whose opinions the bankers rely. The firm will issue a statement today on the Supreme court decision.

BON VOYAGE TO MAYOR

Cermak Gives His Version of the Incident.

Mayor Cermak has not asked Col. A. A. Sprague to resign as commissioner of public works, and Col. Sprague has no intention of resigning.

The commissioner made that statement yesterday following a telephone conversation with the mayor, who was in New York on the eve of his departure on a European vacation. Col. Sprague added that Mayor Cermak was misquoted when he announced Col. Sprague's resignation, to take effect in September. This occurred Tuesday night in the train which was taking the mayor to New York.

Ald. Henry Sonnenschein [22d], secretary to the mayor, held an extended conference with Col. Sprague yesterday in the latter's office. It was during the conference that Mayor Cermak was reached on the long distance phone.

"Tempest in Teapot."

"This whole thing seems to be a tempest in a teapot," Col. Sprague told newspaper men at the end of the conference. "I said this morning that I had not resigned and that I have no intention of doing so.

"I just talked to Mayor Cermak in New York. It seems that the mayor's statement last night was twisted in some manner. What he meant to say was that he wanted me to stay in office, not to resign. There was no misunderstanding between the mayor and me."

"Are you contemplating resigning at any time in the future?" Col. Sprague was asked.

"I am not," he replied.

Offered to Quit, Says Mayor.

New York, July 27.—[Special.]—"Col. Sprague offered to resign, but I told him to forget it until I got back from Europe," said Mayor Cermak today in commenting on the reported resignation of his commissioner of public works. "I talked to him today by long distance telephone and everything was straightened out."

"Then Col. Sprague is to remain as commissioner?" the mayor was asked.

Mayor Cermak said that he has been misunderstood when he was quoted as having said Tuesday night on his train bound for New York that Col. Sprague had resigned

Recalls Incident with Difficulty.

Mayor Cermak was asked about reports current in Chicago that he had a falling out with Commissioner Sprague because the commissioner revoked the permits of salesmen who were vending a car cleaning preparation in alley entrances in the loop. The salesmen, it was said, were employés of Louis Choromokos, florist-politician. Mayor Cermak had difficulty in recalling the matter of the permits, but, when he did, said that it had nothing to do with his differences with Col. Sprague.

"The trouble was over Col. Sprague's serving as receiver for some transit properties," said Mayor Cermak, "but we have straightened all that out."

Col. Sprague was appointed a co-receiver for the Chicago "L" lines and for the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin railway recently by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson in Chicago. Mayor Cermak said he could not "pretend to guess" whether Col. Sprague would tender his resignation upon the mayor's return from Europe, or what he would do.

Talks with Roosevelt.

The mayor spent most of the time between his arrival here early this afternoon and until he boarded the S.S. Bremen at midnight in making and receiving a number of personal and political calls. He talked to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt by telephone, and assured the Democratic nominee for president that he expects to return from his rest in Europe prepared to make a strenuous campaign.

Mayor Cermak also spoke by telephone with Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic national committee and with Mayor Walker, who later attended a reception in the Cermak cabin on the Bremen, which sailed shortly after midnight.

TORNADO KILLS FARMER; CUTS 2 MILE SWATH

Dassel, Minn., July 27.—(AP)—One man was killed and a woman so seriously hurt she is not expected to live as the result of a tornado which swept a two mile swath through 10 miles of farm land east of here tonight.

Starting near Kingston, at the farm of Magnus Johnson, the tornado demolished houses, churches, and farm buildings, killed cattle, and leveled crops before it spent itself several miles southeast of here.

August Nikka, 75, a farmer living four miles northeast of here, was killed while milking in the barn. His wife was critically injured.

Injunction Suit Filed Against Lessor of Beach

State Representative James W. Harris yesterday filed a bill for an injunction in the Superior court seeking to restrain the Congress Construction company from charging bathers for the use of the 12th street island beach. The bill also names as defendants the Century of Progress and the south park commissioners, and asks that the terms of a lease between the former and the construction company for the use of the beach be revealed. It charges that the commissioners had no power to lease public property to a private corporation for profit. The suit was assigned to Superior Judge Marcus Kavanagh.

NEW FINANCIAL SET-UP SEEN IN TRANSIT MERGER

La Salle Street Reacts to Court Decision.

La Salle street reacted promptly yesterday to the Supreme court decision of the day before holding the traction unification ordinance constitutional. It was stated from an authoritative source that the next step on the program would be a revision of the terms on which holders of securities of the "L" and surface lines will be invited to turn them over in exchange for bonds and stock of the Chicago Local Transportation company, which is to merge the elevated and surface lines and build a subway.

Changing economic conditions make it impossible to proceed according to the reorganization plan drafted in 1930 following passage of the unification ordinance, bankers believe. This is particularly true since the Chicago Rapid Transit company was forced into receivership a month ago.

Form New Committee.

Within a few days, it is reported, the membership of a new committee of prominent citizens will be announced, whose first effort will be to persuade the Rapid Transit bondholders to deposit their securities with the committee.

When this has been accomplished it is said that the new committee will meet with committees already formed to represent various security holders of the surface lines. At this conference an amended plan will be drafted for submission to all the security holders.

Transfer of title to the "L" and surface lines to the new Chicago Local Transportation company is only one of three steps necessary before dirt will be moved on the subway and on outlying extensions of the unified transit system.

Two Other Obstacles.

The other steps are the disposal of legal obstacles to the construction of the subway and the finding of some cash by the city. Under the unification ordinance the city agrees to use its traction fund for public benefits in construction of the tubes.

Theoretically, the city has about $63,000,000 in the traction fund which it could apply to subway building. Actually, it has that sum in tax warrants, the cash having been used to meet city and school pay rolls. It has been suggested that the city might borrow money from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Corporation Counsel Sexton was asked yesterday whether, in his opinion, the subway would be one of the self liquidating public works for which the R. F. C. has been authorized to make loans.

"I certainly do," he replied. "However, my idea is that representatives of all the taxing bodies should confer, decide upon a program and present a united front when we appear before the R. F. C. to ask for aid."

Hearings to Be Resumed.

Another result of the decision, it is expected, will be resumption by Judge Ross C. Hall of the hearings on objections of State street property holders to the special assessments which the board of local improvements seeks to levy against them for building the subway. Judge Hall postponed hearing of the case pending the Supreme court's ruling. Now, the hearings are expected to be resumed in the fall and to be pushed to an early conclusion.

James Simpson, who headed the citizens' committee which assisted in drafting the traction settlement, issued an optimistic statement on the situation, urging "full speed ahead" before he left Chicago yesterday for a European vacation. Mr. Simpson, who succeeded Samuel Insull as the head of Chicago's utility companies, said that it was "not impossible" that he will visit the former utilities czar now living in Paris.

CLAIMANT SUFFERS SETBACK IN BATTLE FOR WENDEL ESTATE

New York, July 27.—[Special.]—The circumstantial web by means of which Thomas Patrick Morris, 52 year old paperhanger, hopes to convince Surrogate James A. Foley that he is the legitimate son of John Gottlieb Wendel, and hence a principal heir to the $30,000,000 in New York realty left by Miss Ella Wendel, received a smashing blow today. John M. Harlan, attorney for the executors, denied that Wendel had been out of the United States between the years 1879 and his death in 1914.

Harlan's assertion came as the climax of a grueling cross-examination, which went over the whole ground of Morris' claim—Wendel's secret marriage to his mother at Castle Garden in 1879, their separation, his birth and numerous surreptitious visits by the rich landlord to him in Dundee, Scotland, and similar meetings here.

Morris, a bald little Scot who had sustained the cross-examination without visible weakening, paled when Mr. Harlan shot out the sweeping disclaimer. At the request of his attorney, Raymond L. Wise, Morris was excused temporarily from further testimony.

1 SLAIN, 4 SHOT AT REVIVAL IN KENTUCKY TOWN

Somerset, Ky., July 27.—(AP)—A revival meeting at the Carter Grove Baptist church at Quinton was disrupted tonight by a gun battle in which one man was killed and four wounded, two critically.

The shooting occurred when officers attempted to arrest Dick East, who allegedly was creating a disturbance at the meeting, on a charge of breach of the peace. Murphy Johnson of Sloan's Valley, deputized to assist in making the arrest, was slain.

Tom East, a brother of Dick, and Deputy Sheriff Kenneth M. Brown were so gravely wounded they were not expected to recover. Deputy Bunk Hardwick was seriously wounded and Dick East was shot in the arm.

FRANCE ORDERS GUILLOTINE FOR DOUMER SLAYER

Plea to Be "Shot Like a Soldier" Ignored.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 27.—In a weird half-light filtering through the narrow windows of the assizes hall of the Palais de Justice, the dramatic trial of Paul Gorguloff for the assassination of President Paul Doumer of France, came to its inevitable end this evening.

The self-styled Russian Fascist was found guilty with full responsibility and without extenuating circumstances by the jury after a consultation of less than half an hour, and he was condemned to death on the guillotine by the judges.

Wished to Be Shot.

"I want to die like a good soldier," he said in a trancelike voice, raising his giant hands to the hushed courtroom. "Let me die before a firing squad. You have a right to kill me, but you can't dishonor me. Until I walk to the guillotine I shall cry out that there is no justice."

In the closing speeches of both the state and the defense the mysterious political background of the crime was neglected and the issue was reduced to a simple question of Gorguloff's sanity.

Attorney General Donat Guigue made it clear that as far as the state was concerned no attempt would be made to connect Gorguloff with any definite political movement, red or white. But he took the occasion to warn the authorities against extending the hospitality of the country to certain categories of Russian émigrés of whom Gorguloff was an extreme example.

Sobs at Sight of Wife.

The third and final session of the trial opened on a high note of tragedy when Gorguloff's wife was led to the witness stand. At the sight of her the killer broke into tears, flinging out his arms and crying to her:

"Forgive me. It was for my idea."

In a choked semi-hysterical voice she told of her married life with Gorguloff who she said always treated her kindly. In the last two or three weeks before his crme, however, his conduct became very erratic, she asserted.

Overcome by another outburst from Gorguloff the unhappy woman fell on her knees, crying to the judges:

"Pity, pity! Have pity on me and my child."

Her baby is to be born in a few months. At the close of her testimony Mme. Gorguloff had to be helped from the courtroom.

Makes Eloquent Appeal.

In its final moments the trial attained a tragic intensity unsurpassed in French legal annals. The fading light left the extremities of the big courtroom blurred but slanted down on the scarlet robes of the judges, the bowed assassin sitting in the dock, and his lawyer, patriarchial in black gown and glowing beard so as to make a haunting picture.

Geraud, Gorguloff's counsel, rose in his last appeal to a soaring eloquence worthy of the best traditions of Gallic oratory. As he developed a moving plea for Gorguloff's life the tortured face of the Cossack killer grew more and more agonized. He tore off his collar and appeared on the verge of collapse.

From time to time he threw up his long arms like a drowning man clutching for air. Once he rose to his feet and babbled in a choked voice.

Sentenced by Lamplight.

When the verdict was brought in one last beam of light brought Gorguloff's brutish, suffering head into relief. It was by the light of a lamp which threw a weird patch of yellow light on the bench that Judge Dreyfus read off the grim sentences of the article of the criminal code condemning the prisoner to decapitation under the blade of the guillotine.

Gorguloff's crime occurred at a literary bazaar on May 6 for the benefit of war veterans. The Russian was seized immediately and admitted that he was the assassin. He declared he killed Doumer to bring about a war between France and Russia.

WAUKEGAN JURY ACQUITS MILLER IN BANK TRIAL

Other Defendants May Be Freed.

William H. Miller, formerly director of the closed Waukegan State bank and vice president of the former National Bank of the Republic of Chicago, was found not guilty yesterday in his trial at Waukegan as a member of a conspiracy which defrauded the public through the operations of the Waukegan bank.

The jury was out an hour and a half. The first ballot was 10 to 2 for acquittal and a second ballot, taken immediately after the first, resulted in the twelve agreeing Miller was innocent.

State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county refused to comment on the verdict or to say whether he intends to prosecute the others named in the conspiracy indictment. It was believed, however, that the verdict means the end of his efforts to imprison those he blamed for the losses incurred by his constituents in the collapse of the bank which was closed June 17, 1931.

Others Named in Charges.

Others named with Miller were George N. Woodruff, former president of the Chicago bank; Norman O. Geyer, former president of the Waukegan bank, and John Murray Connors of Waukegan. State Auditor Oscar Nelson was originally included and after one trial on a charge of misfeasance was dismissed. The auditor was given a discharge on the conspiracy indictment.

In his closing argument Prosecutor Smith said the evidence had shown that the public was deceived into believing a $300,000,000 Chicago bank was behind the Waukegan bank, and Miller, as an official of both, was responsible for that belief. He said records had been falsified so that 6,000 depositors were defrauded of $2,000,000, and he said every party to the transactions which kept the bank open long after it was insolvent should go to prison.

Defense Blames Stenger.

The defense threw all the blame on the "mismanagement" of Carl O. Stenger, former president of the bank, who was chairman of its board at the time of the closing and who was a state's witness. Smith replied by saying Stenger was a dupe of the Chicago crowd.

Thomas McEwen, a justice of the peace at Zion, was foreman of the jury. He said a conspiracy had been shown, but to the jurors it appeared that Miller was a lesser figure and the ones to be punished were those higher up than Miller.

CITY WILL TEST LIQUOR FREE TO PREVENT DEATHS

San Francisco, Cal., July 27.—(AP)—Dr. J. C. Getger, city health officer, announced today the municipality would test free of charge all samples of liquor presented for analysis.

The offer first was made for the benefit of visitors to the Shriners' convention in session here, but was extended to include all citizens after three persons had died from drinking liquor which apparently had been poisoned.

"For the health and safety of those who drink," said Dr. Geiger, "the department of health will make liquor tests free. Reports will be made to the prohibition department, but as it takes a long time to make them, no one should feel apprehensive about it."

YANKEE HEIRESS, SON AND PRINCE KILLED IN PLANE

Mrs. Bossom, Wife of M. P., One of Victims.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 27.—Mrs. A. C. Bossom, wife of a noted architect and member of parliament; her son, Bruce, and Prince Otto Erbach Furstenau of Germany were killed in an airplane crash during a heavy storm over Farnham, Surrey, this evening. The plane plunged to earth after what was described as a terrific explosion.

Mrs. Bossom was a leading London hostess. She was a daughter of Samuel Bayne, formerly president of the Seaboard National bank of New York, from whom she inherited a large fortune. Her husband was an authority on the construction of high buildings and was responsible for the erection of more than 100 New York skyscrapers.

Wing Breaks; Blast Follows.

Bruce Bossom, her 21 year old son, who was piloting the machine, was an enthusiastic airman. He had set out for a flight from Heston air field to Southampton, carrying his mother and the prince as passengers. The prince was 23 years old and belonged to a distinguished German family. He had been a guest at the Bossom home.

The machine was a three seater Puss Moth. It is believed that a wing came off in the air and that an explosion followed. The plane burst into flames as it crashed to the earth.

When found all three bodies were burned beyond recognition. Identification was made possible through young Bruce's aviation license and the prince's cigaret case. Mr. Bossom formally identified the bodies.

Pilot Engaged to Wed.

The engagement of Bruce Bossom to Odette Herald, daughter of a fashionable London dressmaker, two weeks ago, attracted attention, as there was parental objection to his marrying so young and while he was planning a trans-Atlantic and other flights. He had crashed in Cheshire in May, but was only slightly injured.

The plane, when it crashed tonight, was near the country homes of David Lloyd George and Viscount Snowden.

Weigh I. C. Plea to Dismiss Track Depression Action

Following the presentation of oral arguments, the Illinois commerce commission yesterday took under advisement a motion by the Illinois Central railway to dismiss a demand for depression of its tracks on the South Chicago branch. It was said that the decision probably would not be given before the fall session. The South Shore Chamber of Commerce, represented by State Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, had demanded the depression of tracks, which would eliminate 31 grade crossings in 71st street, Exchange and Commercial avenues.

AARON FOX QUITS SANITARIUM TO FACE WIFE'S SUIT

New York, July 27.—(AP)—Aaron Fox, 37, former vice president of the Fox Films corporation, came here from a Hartford, Conn., sanitarium today to answer a charge he abandoned his two young children in destitute circumstances last October.

His surrender at the district attorney's office, after which he was freed on bail, scored a point for his estranged wife, Mrs. Alice Fox, in her long fight to get money for herself and the children, William, 6, and Anne Carol, 4.

The litigation is three-cornered, involving also Aaron's brother, William, reported to have retired with millions when he sold his motion picture interests in April, 1930.

Mrs. Aaron Fox is "absolutely without money to live on," her lawyer declared.

Lawyers for Aaron Fox insist he is ill and "broke." He is to return to the sanitarium at once.

The two children are suing for $250,000 damages from their uncle on a charge of "conspiracy" to deprive them of their father's "love and protection."

CRIME IN LONDON SPURTS; RECORD 5,642 MORE CASES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 27.—Crime in London is increasing. Indictable offenses jumped from 20,550 in 1930 to 26,192 last year, according to the report issued tonight by Lord Trenchard, commissioner of the metropolitan police. Burglaries decreased slightly, but housebreaking cases increased about 1,000 and shopbreaking by 1,250.

Smash and grab raids were more numerous. The commissioner said that criminals were greatly facilitated because so many cars were left parked in the streets. Cases of simple larceny increased from 7,036 to 9,534. Drunkenness declined, with 4,469 fewer cases recorded.

New methods to capture criminals have been instituted, it was reported, calling for a greater use of motor transport, telephones and wireless. The commissioner stressed the need for more automatic traffic signals.

CANADA JOCKEYS WITH BRITAIN FOR TRADE POSITION

Imperial Parley Goes "Underground."

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ottawa, Ont., July 27.—In spite of an outward appearance of inactivity, the imperial conference was exceedingly busy underground today. No formal meetings were held either of the full conference or of committees, but all sorts of "conversations" took place under cover.

The result of these parleys will be evident in a few days when the committees have adopted the plans worked out informally and passed them on to the full conference.

Most important of these informal meetings was one which took place late last night between Premier R. B. Bennett of Canada with some of his principal advisers and the leaders of the British delegation. It was mostly a jockeying for position.

No Cards Shown.

The British wished to know something of the generous concessions about which Bennett has talked so much, but Bennett wanted to know first what Britain plans to do for Canada. Neither side showed its hand.

The inevitable Russian question came up again, however, and Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council, and Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, convinced the Canadian leader that Britain would not consent to an embargo on Russian products in Britain. The old arguments about Russia's immense commercial debt to Britain and to Germany and the effect of a collapse in Russia on the political situation of the world were gone over again. Bennett, however, stuck to his guns and the British promised to see what could be done.

Chamberlain is reported to be framing a compromise formula but he is meeting with difficulty in reconciling the facts with Bennett's desires and may not complete his task for a few days.

Home Politics Bother British.

Baldwin and Chamberlain are reported to be agreed in principle as to the necessity of taxing meats, base metals and dairy products from foreign countries in order to give the dominions preference, but here again in the case of meat they are up against a serious political problem at home. This was not helped by the news of an overwhelming government defeat in the by-election at Wednesbury, England, when a Labor party candidate was victorious today.

Bennett also is peeved at the action of the Canadian wheat trade in abandoning the demand for a preference or quota on wheat. He pleaded with the British to give him something on wheat for its political effect on his farmer constituents. So far, however, wheat remains out of the preference picture. One new suggestion is for Britain in some way to guarantee a market for 100 million bushels of Canadian wheat, which is about one-third of the exportable surplus.

The sub-committee of the meat producing countries has agreed to put forward to Britain a demand for a flat tariff of two cents a pound on foreign meat with dominion meat on the free list and a quota for home killed dominion meat.

Against this the British farmers' union and some outside organizations are putting forward a plan for three cents tariff on all foreign meat except from Argentina which would pay a cent and a half tariff, with dominion meat free.

Butter Groups Ask Higher Tax.

The reason for this treatment of Argentina as a sort of half a dominion is the large investment of British capital in the country and the fact that it is a large and growing customer for British goods.

The butter subcommittee of the producing countries has also agreed to its proposal. The basis of this is that the 10 per cent tax now imposed on foreign butter in Britain is useless in keeping out the Danish and Dutch product and that there must be a higher tariff and a quota as well. So far Britain has expressed no opinion on these demands which have not come officially before her.

Tomorrow the committee on finance and currency meets for the first time to receive memoranda from each dominion on its condition. No plan has been envisaged and none is likely to be worked out. The intention now is just to talk things over and leave the matter to be dealt with at a world economic conference at which the United States is expected to be represented and where it is hoped Uncle Sam will play his rôle of universal benefactor.

"The "underground" work of the conference today caused a crop of rumors which were spiked as fast as they gained circulation. The most interesting were that the British had declined to sit on any committees on which the Irish Free State is represented and that Premier Bennett had offered to mediate between the Free State and Britain. Both these were denied by all the parties concerned.

British Scheme to Appease Princes of India Is Mapped

BY EUGENE SPECK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 27.—The report of the third and last subcommittee of the Indian round table conference, which was assigned to study constitutional problems, was published today. It is designed to establish the principles for guiding the British government in fixing the financial relationship between the prince ruled states and the eventual federal central government of India as a self-ruling dominion, which will also include the provinces now forming British India.

The report is a monumental work, including 293 pages of statistics, tables, and appendices. It records the views of eighty-eight princes, all owing allegiance to the king emperor, George V., under different treaties and all paying varying tributes, or "cash contributions" as the princes themselves prefer to call them, and each enjoying a different set of privileges. In addition the committee met deputations representing collections of smaller states.

Necessitates 100 New Treaties.

The group worked with the idea of fixing all payments to the federal units, including the states, on a uniform basis, therefore, about 100 new treaties will have to be drafted because each prince will need individual terms when he enters the federation.

In considering each state's account the committee sought to balance credits such as immunity from salt tax, coinage, and the right to customs revenues against debits, which include tributes and ceded territories. The latter involves a background of historical complexities going back to the days of the East India company when land was ceded by various princes in return for military protection.

The committee decided that all cash contributions should be remitted 20 years after a state entered the federation. It agreed to the round table conference recommendations that the states paying more than 5 per cent of their revenue in tributes should be given immediate relief. Reduction of the salt tax immunities of the princes is urged. This tax which Mahatma Gandhi has attacked amounts to $20,000,000 annually, more than 6 per cent of the Indian revenue.

May Solve Hindu-Moslem Row.

One step remains before the joint parliamentary committee with a few Indian members will be directed to draft the constitution, which it is proposed to give to India—that is Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's own solution of the communal row. Mr. MacDonald is understood to have devised a method to meet the demands of the Hindu and Moslem electorates for representation in the legislature, which he believes will satisfy both factions. He hopes to make this public late this week.

CANADA TANNERS ASK FREE ENTRY FOR U. S. HIDES

BY GEORGE SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., July 27.—America gets one trade break at least out of the British empire trade conference. Canada finds that the 15 per cent tariff recently imposed against American hides, mainly from Chicago to throw the business to New Zealand, is not going to work.

Canadian tanners in private conversations now propose that American hides again be made free, and that Canada agree to buy in return all New Zealand's exportable hides at the market price.

Canada finds that New Zealand has no hides to export. New Zealand communicates the information that her cow and ox kill will be down from 30 to 50 per cent due to Argentine competition in Britain.

In return for an empire agreement on a return to free entry into Canada for American and Argentine hides, Canadian leather men are offering to drop the duty against British finished leather goods from its present 15 to 12½ per cent.

The 15 per cent imposition against American hides to help New Zealand has raised boot and shoe prices in Canada. British manufacturers, working with duty free hides, were able to cut into the Canadian domestic market, and the effect of the proposed change would be to give Canadian boot and shoe makers an even break again with British in the Canadian market.

IRELAND URGED TO SEEK PEACE IN TARIFF WAR

Senator Asks New Parley with Britain.

BY HUGH CURRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, July 27.—Another attempt will be made to reopen negotiations with Great Britain to halt the economic warfare over the land annuities dispute. In the senate today Senator Counihan gave notice of a motion tomorrow. In view of the present economic strife, which is doing serious damage to all parties, the government will be urged immediately to appoint representatives to reopen negotiations with the British. President Eamon de Valera will probably attend the senate to state his position.

Senator Counihan is a member of the Cosgrave party and is one of the large cattle exporters who are being severely hit by the British duty of 20 per cent on cattle. The British taxes are only slowly showing results owing to the heavy imports of all kinds to forestall the tariffs.

Coal merchants who had raised their prices were called to the government buildings today and warned that if they did not desist prosecutions would follow.

There is a rumor, unconfirmed, that James Geoghegan, minister of justice, will resign following the liberation yesterday of Gerald Dempsey, a captain in the republican army, who was serving a sentence for contempt. Legal circles are greatly incensed.

The influence and audacity of the Irish republican army are growing. The republicans today "commanded" the nationalist members not to attend any more sessions of the Ulster house of commons.

RAIL MEN AGREE TO CUT IN HOURS FOR CONDUCTORS

An agreement was drafted last night by officers of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen urging union conductors throughout the United States and Canada to reduce their working hours so as to spread employment among trainmen.

It is expected the agreement will be signed today at the Great Northern hotel, where the committees of both brotherhoods have been meeting for the last twelve days. Representing the conductors are S. N. Berry, president, and L. E. Sheppard. Alexander F. Whitney, president, and P. C. Bradley are appearing for the trainmen.

It was explained that by virtue of seniority conductors have been enabled to displace trainmen. The new agreement provides that conductors shall reduce their runs to not more than 3,500 miles a month. This would give immediate work to between five and six thousand trainmen, Mr. Whitney estimated.

CHICAGO'S FAIR SUPPORTED BY PERSONAL CREDIT

Milwaukee, Wis., July 27.—[Special.]—Capt. John W. The question had been asked whether a successful fair was possible with the present financial condition of the city of Chicago. Capt. Gorby explained that Wisconsin and other middle western states will profit through a great increase in their summer visitors.

SEIZE 4 BANDITS AFTER RUSH HOUR HOLDUP IN LOOP

Four men were captured during the evening rush hour yesterday as they fled from a daylight robbery of a bookmaker's stand on the second floor at 13 North Franklin street. At the Central police station they identified themselves as George Meyers, 22 years old, 538 West 37th street; Morris Allen, 21, of 1401 South Clifton Park avenue; John Cerone, 22, of 642 North Homan avenue; Irving Cohen, 37, of 3214 West 16th street.

Armed with revolvers Meyers, Allen, and Cohen held up Charles "Chink" Weber, proprietor, and three or four customers, while Cerone took $250 from the cash register, Capt. John Horan of the Central station was told.

As they fled to the street they attracted the attention of George Tambling, mounted policeman, and George Jensen, a traffic officer, who captured three of them. The fourth was caught in a nearby alley by Deputy Sheriff J. H. Welsh. The money was found on Cerone.

The most INEXPENSIVE WAY to buy an ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

A statement by G. C. BOHN
President of
BOHN REFRIGERATOR COMPANY
Makers of quality refrigerators for 35 years

EVERY family that thinks of buying an electric refrigerator must face one of two choices. You can consider all electric refrigerators alike. Then pick the lowest price tag. Or you can face the facts . . . realize that quality and value vary tremendously. Then buy on the basis of lowest cost per year.

Right now many refrigerators are being offered to the public at "cheap prices." Manufacturers from other lines have set up over night as refrigeration specialists. They claim "highest quality . . . at the price of 'cheap' refrigerators." . . . There "ain't no such animal." Never was. And never will be.

We have no quarrel with the family that wants to get an electric refrigerator as inexpensively as possible. That's as it should be. Nor the family that wants to pay only a small amount down. That's why we offer the Bohn Electric for as little as 25c a day. We have no quarrel with the reputable manufacturers of good refrigerators, who ask an honest price and deliver honest value.

But we are against hoodwinking people into believing that any refrigerator sold at a cheap price will give them everything that the honestly made, honestly priced refrigerators will deliver.

And we still believe that the $50 overcoat that lasts three winters is a better investment than the $25 "bargain" that wears out in one.

For the guidance of people who really want to know how to look for value in a refrigerator, we set down the way Bohn measures up . . . .

CABINET—A custom built combination of 18 gauge steel and finest imported British Columbia spruce. In 35 years of making fine refrigerator cabinets, we have yet to find a combination that produces a longer lasting, more efficient cabinet.

CABINET FINISH—Elastic porcelain—a development of 28 years of porcelain making. So far as we know, we are the only manufacturers of refrigerators who make their own porcelain. The Bohn cabinet has elastic porcelain inside and out. Will not mar, peel or crack. Won't turn yellow with age—the interior lining is stainless and acid-resistant.

OPERATING UNIT—Simple rotary type. Only five moving parts. Mounted on springs to cut vibration and noise to a minimum.

FAST-FREEZING—In impartial University tests Bohn Electric froze ice cubes faster than four leading refrigerators tested under identical conditions. The Bohn Electric made ice cubes 20 minutes faster than its nearest competitor and five hours and 20 minutes faster than the slowest.

FOOD STORAGE SPACE—The smallest Bohn model has four cubic feet of space for food storing and a shelf area of 7 square feet. PLEASE MAKE A CAREFUL NOTE OF THIS. Midget refrigerators which do not give ample space for food are no bargain at any price.

NUMBER OF ICE CUBES—The smallest Bohn Electric model makes 30 ice cubes, or about 4 pounds of ice. Because Bohn's fast freezing produces ice cubes so quickly you can always have available plenty of ice cubes.

HARDWARE—We chromium plate our own brass hardware (hinges, door fastener and trim), so that we may be sure it is properly done.

DOOR—Special easy closing catch on door fastener. Doesn't stick when opening, doesn't have to be banged shut. Tests made by a leading magazine show that in the average home the refrigerator door is opened and closed 66 times a day, so an easy working door is a real point to consider.

GUARANTEE—Unit and cabinet of every Bohn Electric Refrigerator is fully guaranteed for three years. It is guaranteed by a company that has specialized in making fine refrigerators for 35 years.

The Bohn Refrigerator Company has Factory Service Departments that offer immediate attention. When you buy a Bohn there is no danger of buying an "orphan" refrigerator on which you may not be able to get service, no danger of expensive and annoying repair bills.

This is the value Bohn Electric delivers, honest dollar for dollar value. But to make all this mean something very desirable to you in terms of the electric refrigerator you will put in your kitchen, we ask earnestly that you at least see a Bohn Electric before you decide to buy.

Any of our floor people will be glad to show you the Bohn Electric point by point and let you form your own opinion. If you wish, we will have a representative call, but we suggest that you actually see the Bohn yourself at any of our convenient show rooms.

There you can also find out how much the Bohn Electric will cost you per year, a figure that will naturally depend on the size of the model you select. Compare that cost with the similar cost of any other refrigerator in which you may be interested, and we will rest confidently on your judgment as to which is the least expensive refrigerator for you to buy.

ROOSEVELT WILL MAKE FIRST RADIO TALK SATURDAY

Speech Will Tell Policies Over National Chain.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Albany, N. Y., July 27.—[Special.]—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will make the first radio address of his campaign for the presidency next Saturday evening. It will be broadcast to the nation over the NBC system between 8 and 8:30 o'clock, eastern daylight saving time.

GOV. JOSEPH B. ELY
[Acme Photo.]

The Democratic candidate announced today that in this maiden radio campaign speech he will discuss the party platform, embodying the chief issues before the people. It is to be the first of many speeches on the air, for the governor expects to take full advantage of radio to broadcast his views.

Talks with Smith Backer.

There may be a bit of political strategy in this first radio utterance, for it was discussed with a significant air today during a conference between Gov. Roosevelt and Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts.

The New England governor lunched with Gov. Roosevelt on the breeze blessed veranda of the governor's mansion and, although both governors were quite uncommunicative afterward, it is believed that another hatchet was consigned to the sod.

Gov. Ely nominated Al Smith in Chicago last month and held his Massachusetts delegates steadfast for Al to the final roll call and he has not yet publicly vowed support to Roosevelt.

Ely Dodges Questions.

He parried all questions after today's tête-à-tête by saying that he would announce his stand in definite terms next Monday. At that time, Gov. Ely said, he also will make known whether he will be a candidate for reelection in the Massachusetts gubernatorial primary next month.

The New Englander was cold and most sparing and choosy with the words he uttered to newspaper men. Sitting beside Gov. Roosevelt in a porch swing and puffing on a cigaret, Gov. Ely said between puffs that there would be no doubt about his stand after Monday.

It was suggested to him that his attitude might be construed to show unfriendliness toward Roosevelt, and he demurred at that, but he kept reiterating: "Why don't you wait until Monday?"

Expect Pledge to Roosevelt.

Candid observers who know Ely well said he is by nature cool and cautious, and their opinion was that the governor on Monday will announce his candidacy for reëlection and his support for Roosevelt.

It was considered unlikely that Ely would motor down to Albany from his Westfield home, as he did today, if he had not already made up his mind. The best hunches were that he is engaged in a "building up" process, making it appear to the folks back home, where Al Smith is idolized, that he isn't falling too fast for the man who won the presidential nomination from their favorite.

Asked whether Gov. Roosevelt's talk Saturday and his own statement Monday were related, Gov. Ely replied: "I think so."

It was considered probable that Gov. Roosevelt will emphasize matters close to the hearts of the Massachusetts people and that this will pave the way for Ely's indorsement of Roosevelt.

Gov. Roosevelt, in high good humor after his chat with Ely, opened the discussion with newspaper men by announcing facetiously that he and the Massachusetts leader had come to a decision of vital importance.

"We are going to take a trip this summer, Gov. Ely and myself, to Boston Corners, where we plan to see that famous acre of ground which nobody knows what state it is in, Massachusetts, Connecticut, or New York. This question of territoriality goes back 150 years and it may now be determined."

The acre of land lies in the corner where the three states touch, and its ownership has never been settled.

Comes from Ranch

Mrs. Marion Margery Scranton, Republican national committeewoman for Pennsylvania, arrived in Chicago yesterday and paid a visit to Republican campaign headquarters in the Palmer house. She was en route from a ranch in Wyoming to her home in Scranton. Mrs. Scranton is one of six women on the executive committee of the national committee. While at the headquarters she conferred with Everett Sanders, chairman, and Mrs. Ellis R. Yost, director of the women's division. Mrs. Scranton said the Republican women are better organized in Pennsylvania than in any other state, having a woman's organization in every precinct. Mrs. Scranton is the wife of Worthington Scranton, former president of the Scranton Gas and Water company.

LEGAL TO OWN ARTICLES USED IN MAKING RUM

Springfield, Ill., July 27.—(AP)—Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom ruled today that possession of articles which might be used for manufacture of intoxicating liquor does not constitute violation of the state prohibition law.

The opinion was requested by State's Attorney R. C. Rice of Galesburg, Ill., in the case of the American Malt Products company, which displayed for sale bottles, jugs, kegs, malt extract, apricot, peach and burgundy flavoring, and other articles.

"Since all the articles you mention may be sold and used for a legal purpose," Carlstrom declared, "the mere possession of the same is not of itself a violation of law."

Proof that such articles were being purchased and used for illegal manufacture of intoxicating liquor would be necessary, the attorney general said, for conviction under the Illinois law.

38 INDICTED IN MILK WAR POST BONDS OF $3,000

Thirty-eight members of the Pure Milk association appeared yesterday at the McHenry county court house in Woodstock and posted bonds of $3,000 each on charges of conspiracy and unlawful assembly. They were indicted with Don N. Geyer, manager, and 16 other members of the association on charges growing out of the milk price war last spring. Geyer and nine others named in the indictment had posted bond previously. Seven other defendants have failed to do so. The indictments, returned on July 16, were based on evidence by witnesses to the milk riot at Union, near Woodstock, on April 11, in which several hundred pounds of milk produced by nonmembers were dumped.

CITE FERGUSON FOR CONTEMPT IN ALIMONY CASE

Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg issued a contempt citation yesterday for Stephen Ferguson, son of the late Charles W. Ferguson, pioneer Rogers Park real estate operator, who was left a $300,000 share of his father's $1,750,000 estate, for failure to pay $125 a month alimony to his divorced wife, Genevieve, 1223 Chase avenue Ferguson will appear in court next Tuesday. Two weeks ago Mrs. Ferguson was allowed to keep title to certain properties in the elder Ferguson's estate which her husband had given her to insure his alimony payments. Attorneys for the estate appeared before Judge Daniel P. Trude and announced that the estate could not be settled until the deeds were returned to Ferguson's name.

Mrs. Resnick refused and yesterday she filed a bill for annulment in the Circuit court, charging that she had "misunderstood" her marriage, believing that her husband would continue to live in Chicago.

GIRL RELENTS IN HOLDUP; YOUTHS GIVEN CLEMENCY

Victim Asks Mercy at 25th Court Appearance.

Miss Marie MacLaughlan, 17 year old pistol marksman, yesterday relented in her prosecution of two youths indicted for robbery with a gun. She joined with a number of others in recommending clemency for the defendants, and Chief Justice Harry Fisher granted them probation.

Last May 2, Miss MacLaughlan and her mother were held up in their restaurant at 9137 South Western avenue by three young bandits. She grabbed a pistol and wounded one, Charles Harrington, who was captured. The other two fled, but were arrested later.

In Court 25 Times.

The girl and her father, J. D. MacLaughlan, who taught her to shoot a gun, appeared in court for the 25th time yesterday as witnesses. On Tuesday at a Juvenile court hearing they heard Harrington, who is 16 years old and thus was tried in the Juvenile court, sentenced to a reformatory.

Yesterday, when Harrington's two companions, Alex Johnston, 18 years old, and Allen Reynolds, 18 years old, were arraigned, a number of character witnesses appeared for them, testifying that their previous behavior had been good and asking that they be given probation.

The girl complainant, who had appeared many times in court previously to prosecute the defendants, unexpectedly joined in the plea for probation yesterday.

"Harrington was the leader, the one with the gun," she told the judge. "If he's put away in a safe place, I'm satisfied. These two others ought to be given another chance."

Show Good School Records.

Evidence was produced by the parents of Johnston and Reynolds showing that both had good school records and had never been arrested before. Harrington, although younger than the other two, dominated them and led them into evil ways, the judge was told.

The 25 appearances in court necessary for disposal of the cases were occasioned by technicalities of the law, court officials asserted. The fact that Harrington was tried in the Juvenile court and the others in the Criminal court caused many continuances before all the evidence could be presented, according to the officials.

Husband's Suicide Is Laid to Worry Over Separation

Discouragement over his unhappy married life is believed to have caused Otto Berger, 38 years old, a foreman employed by the Standard Cap and Seal corporation, 1200 Fullerton avenue, to shoot and kill himself last night in his room at 15 East Pearson street. Berger was married 20 months ago to Mrs. Augusta Berger, a divorcée. Berger's sister said that he and his wife quarreled frequently over financial matters and that they were separated two months ago.

MYSTERY OF SINGING GRAVEYRD "GHOST" NEAR PRISON SOLVED

A crowd of 2,000 curious and awed men and women gathered in the vicinity of the old cemetery adjoining the women's prison at Joliet this morning, waiting to hear the mournful chant of a suspected ghost. Nightly, during recent weeks, the eerie voice of the supposed spirit wafted above the tombstones.

But the mysterious voice was silent this morning, as it was yesterday morning—to the mingled disappointment and relief of the hushed audience.

The voice will be silent henceforth. Furthermore, it's not a ghost's voice. It belongs to William Chrysler, a very much alive convict trusty. It was silenced two nights ago by prison officials, who at the time had no idea it was being mistaken for that of a ghost.

"Chrysler is a trusty," explained a prison official. "As such it's his duty to go to the quarry during the night and morning and shut off the pumps. He has to make three or four trips each night and morning, and to do so passes about 400 yards from the cemetery. Chrysler is a singer and it was his voice the people heard, for on every one of his trips he entertained himself by bursting into song."

WHAT-A-MAN TO FIGHT "MA'S" PLEA TO GET DIVORCE

Las Vegas, Nev., July 27.—(AP)—Guy Edward Hudson, husband of Mrs. Minnie [Ma] Kennedy-Hudson, evangelist, said today he had refused to sign a waiver which would allow her to obtain a divorce in Los Angeles by default.

He said Mrs. Hudson, who sued him in Los Angeles for divorce several days ago, had written him that everything was "all set" for a quick Mexican divorce.

Hudson, employed in a recreation parlor here, announced he would demand a service of summons and would file a cross complaint, giving "my side" of the case.

Stamps, Ark., July 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Grace Chastain, 19, walked in her sleep last night, was mistaken for a burglar, and was shot to death by her husband. Police accepted his version of the killing and did not hold him.

SENTENCE AUTO THIEVES.

Kenneth Hess, 19 years old, and his brother Emery, 17, both of 1313 Cleveland avenue, were sentenced to a year in the house of correction and fined $200 yesterday by Judge Howard P. O'Connell on charges of stealing automobile accessories.

2 ARMY RESERVE OFFICERS KILLED AT OHIO AIR FETE

Circleville, O., July 27.—[Special.]—Two army reserve officers, both residents of Columbus, were killed today three miles north of here when their plane, participating in an air show, crashed after attaining an altitude of 200 feet.

The victims are First Lieutenant Albert E. Harter, 34, prominent Columbus attorney, and Staff Sergeant Cuba H. Burns, 36, assistant traffic manager of Port Columbus.

Burns accompanied Lieut. Oscar Rogers, commandant of the army base at Port Columbus, on the flight to Circleville, but was returning with Harter.

Cause of the crash was unknown, but it is thought the engine failed. Both victims were burned when the plane burst into flames after the crash. Both were members of the 308th observation squadron.

RAID BARES RED PLOTTING OF RUNS TO RUIN BANKS

Letters Link Propaganda to Communists

The source of propaganda causing runs to many Chicago banks was believed to be exposed yesterday with the seizure of literature in a hotel room at Pontiac, Mich., detailing the operations of a communistic plot to wreck the financial structure of the nation. Authorities throughout the middle west were notified to search for George Rowland, occupant of the room, who fled after the raid.

MELVIN A. TRAYLOR.

Letters seized in Rowland's room, all signed with initials only, commended him for his campaign against banks in Chicago, while others reported progress in Cleveland and other cities of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois. The hotel room was raided by Capt. Ira Marmon of the Michigan state police after Rowland's telephone wire had been tapped for two weeks. Police waited for Rowland's return, but they believed he had been warned by a confederate.

Traylor Blames Radicals.

When apprised of the seizure of the letters, Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, said there was no doubt that runs on Chicago banks were caused by false rumors spread by radicals by telephone and anonymous letters.

"Anonymous telephone calls were used in attempts to cause panic among the depositors of even the strongest banks," said Mr. Traylor. "Reports were received in Chicago from many cities where the same system was used. I believe that the plot against the banks was nation-wide."

Communist Letter Bared.

One of the letters to Rowland was from Cleveland, signed "Comrade H. G." stating:

"Following your instructions to me I am writing to give you a clear picture of our campaign against the banks in this district. You know it is a slow proposition to get people steamed up for a run, but your telephone program is working out fine. There is considerable unrest here and we are informed by clerks in the Union Trust and the Cleveland Trust that the depositors are very nervous.

"We note here with satisfaction that you are making considerable progress in Pontiac and that you are taking a good crack at the one jug [bank] which is there, the First National, and it seems to us that if you can put it over, a good dent will be made in the bank at Detroit. It won't be long before our combined efforts will make a lot of trouble there as well as here, Chicago and elsewhere.

Linked to Communist Bureau.

"I did not have much trouble in convincing the agitprop [agitation and propaganda bureau of the communist party] that this was important work and the sooner we strip the petty bourgeois and the white collar stiffs of their faith in the banks the sooner we will bring about the unrest that will lead to the revolution."

According to the American Vigilant Intelligence federation, which has records on communists and their activities, "Comrade H. G." is Harry Gannes, "agitprop" director for the New York district, who frequently contributes articles attacking the financial structure of the country to the Communist magazine and the Daily Worker. Gannes, officials of the federation said, was in Chicago in the spring of 1931 when bank runs first became serious.

The federation officials believe that Rowland's real name is George E. Powers, one time communist candidate for borough president of Queens, who was arrested in Hancock, Mich., last August on a charge of violating the Michigan criminal syndicalism law.

Directs Chicago Propaganda.

The agitprop director for the Chicago district, according to this federation, is Herbert Newton, alias Gilmer Brady, a Negro, with offices in the communist party headquarters at 1413 West 18th street. Gilmer fled from Atlanta, Ga., after being indicted on a criminal syndicalism charge, and is now taking an advanced course in sociology at the University of Chicago, according to the federation records.

A telegram to Rowland, signed "W. B.," and dated from Chicago, said: "Much progress here. Considerable run on jugs in loop. Workers and petty bourgeois depositors spreading word rapidly. Big accounts nervous and will soon get panicky. This will bring results. Party securing additional lists, but slow. Big shots panicky. Will write full details."

An unmailed letter written to "Comrade H. G.," expressed encouragement over the runs on the big banks, "particularly the Big Five in Chicago, meaning the First National, the Continental Illinois, etc."

U. S. Secret Service on Job.

Treasury department officials at Washington announced that federal secret service agents in all cities were coöperating with state authorities in search of radicals conducting the whispering campaign against the banks. They explained that the secret service operatives have no jurisdiction over such activities, nor can the Reds be prosecuted under the national banking act, but the situation, it was said, is so serious as to warrant coöperation with local officials for state prosecutions.

State laws make it a serious crime to foment runs on banks and Illinois has a drastic sedition law, under which the radicals might be prosecuted since their literature states that the campaign against the banks is the first step in their proposed revolution.

Under the federal seditious conspiracy act the advocacy of force to overthrow the government is essential, but in Illinois the law, which provides a penalty up to 20 years, is directed against any one who advocates the reformation of the government by "violence or any other unlawful means."

BAIN DEFENSE OPENS

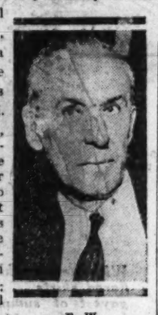
DEFEND VALUES ON REAL ESTATE AT BAIN TRIAL

Overrule Motions for Not Guilty Verdicts.

Two real estate appraisers testified as defense witnesses yesterday in the conspiracy trial of John Bain, former head of a chain of twelve banks; Bain's sons, John H. and Robert A., and his son-in-law, W. Merle Fisher. Their testimony was to the effect that the valuations placed by the bankers on property on which bonds were issued and sold were justified.



F. W. GRAPPERHAUS.

The first move of the defense, after many weeks of prosecution testimony, was the presentation by Attorney Francis X. Busch of 297 motions. Of these, 293 asked for an immediate verdict of not guilty and 4 were motions to strike certain testimony from the record.

Overrules All Motions.

Judge John M. O'Connor, who is presiding at the trial without a jury, overruled all motions. Attorney Busch said he would not argue the motions in justice to his clients who wish the opportunity of telling their stories from the witness stand to show there was no criminal intent in their operations.

One of Busch's motions was to strike out all reference to the Lews Participation Trust, a Bain investment organization, on the ground it had not been mentioned in the bill of particulars furnished the defendants. Special Assistant State's Attorney Edwin J. Raber, in answering the argument, said:

"Evidence concerning this trust is admissible to show that John Bain knew his banks were insolvent in December, 1930. This trust was organized to buy Bain bank stocks which the public was offering for sale. He did this to keep up their market price. He organized this trust and solicited public contributions to finance it and it shows that he had guilty knowledge. He was stealing to keep his banks open."

Appraiser Takes Stand.

Judge O'Connor did not pass upon the merit of that argument but he overruled the objection. Attorney Busch then called Charles R. Bixby, 704 Ashland avenue, Wilmette, a real estate appraiser. Bixby identified his appraisals and then was turned over to Raber for cross-examination.

Raber asked him about a plot of 210 acres near Melrose Park which he said the Bain interests had bought at $500 an acre, or a total of $105,000. Bixby admitted that the valuation of $863,000 he placed on this acreage was not based on other sales or offers but on statements by Fisher, who was then cashier of the West Englewood bank. The figure of $863,000 appeared as the aggregate of values written on a blue print of the location prepared by Fisher and shown to Bixby and which Raber later made available for public inspection.

40 Per Cent Lower.

Bixby said he later appraised the same properties for the receiver of the Bain banks and his second appraisals were 40 per cent lower than the first. He said if he had known that efforts to sell the Melrose Park tract had been abandoned his first figures would have been considerably lower.

F. W. Grapperhaus, 8228 Ingleside avenue, an appraiser and a member of the Chicago Real Estate board, testified he had put a "peak" valuation on property known as the Chatham Tower, 79th street and Evans avenue, at $336,883 on July 11, 1928. On the day the banks closed he said the property was worth $298,789. It had been shown that the Bains issued bonds amounting to $235,000 against this property.

Mr. Busch said he would call other appraisers today.

FINDS PROFESSIONAL CLASSES DRINK MORE THAN BEFORE DRY LAW

New York, July 27.—[Special.]—Prohibition has failed to cut the nation's drink bill, but the working class is spending less on liquor, while the business and professional classes are spending more than in pre-prohibition years, Dr. Clark Warburton says in a survey of "the outlaw alcoholic beverage industry" made public today by the Columbia University Press.

Prohibition, Dr. Warburton finds, has neither aided savings and investment nor increased the purchasing power of the masses. He is unable to trace the increased productivity of the American worker to the eighteenth amendment. The farming classes as a whole have gained, he holds.

The expenditure of the working class on alcohol, he estimates, is about one billion dollars less than it would be without national prohibition; the expenditures of the professional salaried classes is at least one billion more.

BRAZIL DEFEATS REBEL FORCES; TAKES 353 MEN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, July 27.—(AP)—The war ministry announced tonight that Gen. Waldomiro Lima's 8,000 federal troops swung to the north 125 miles above Itarare today and defeated a rebel force, capturing an entire battalion of 353 Paulista. Twenty federals were wounded in the battle.

Bolivia Masses 12,000 Men.

BUENOS AIRES, July 27.—La Nacion's correspondents at frontier points report that Bolivia has mobilized between 12,000 and 14,000 men to oppose Paraguay in the disputed Chaco region, with headquarters at Villamontes, where Col. Toro is commander in chief. Col. Toro was a member of former Provisional President Galindo Blanco's junta.

The army is reported to be well supplied with the latest equipment, about thirty planes, and a well organized hospital service.

Re-Enforce Police to Cope with British Mill Strikers

BURNLEY, England, July 27.—(AP)—Local police were reënforced by a considerable number of Manchester policemen today when disturbances in connection with the cotton mill strike called here last week exceeded the expectations of local union officials. About 22,000 mill hands are on strike. The stoppage is practically complete in all mills.

Trace South American Red Propaganda to Uruguay

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, July 27.—The flood of communist propaganda now in Argentina has been traced to Uruguay, the postmaster general reported today. He said that pamphlets printed in Europe are shipped in wholesale lots to Montevideo and then are mailed throughout South America.

SEIZE 25 ARMED HITLERITES; HINT REVOLT PLANNED

Report Election Failure to Result in Coup.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 27.—Police today seized a truck and 25 uniformed National Socialists carrying arms and ammunition. This action gave strength to rumors that desperadoes in the ranks of Adolf Hitler's followers are planning a revolt if they fail to win control of the reichstag in Sunday's elections.

Hitler himself and his lieutenants stress the statement that they will not "leave the narrow path of legality." They have issued orders to followers to refrain from military preparations of any kind.

Hitler's great appeal to the masses was evident again here tonight when 120,000 men and women waited in the stadium from 5 o'clock this afternoon until 10 o'clock this afternoon until 10 o'clock tonight to listen to their chief. It was rainy and cold, but the crowds did not budge from their seats.

Nazis Hit at Von Papen.

BERLIN, July 27.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler's National Socialists and the Nationalists took a couple of pot shots at the Von Papen government today, thereby indicating that the administration is having a difficult time, even with its supporters, on the eve of the reichstag elections Sunday.

Hans Kerrl, president of the Prussian diet and a Hitler leader, issued a demand that Chancellor Franz von Papen, in his capacity as federal commissioner of Prussia, rescind a Prussian decree issued June 8 under which all civil servants of the state were taxed 2½ to 5 per cent of their salaries in the form of a forced loan.

Alfred Hugenberg, leader of the Nationalist party, asked the chancellor, as head of the federal government, to rescind an emergency decree issued by the reich June 14 which taxed every German who has a job.

Called Campaign Thunder.

Political observers asserted these two demands on the chancellor were nothing more than an attempt by the Nazis and Nationalists to square themselves with the voters by indulging in a bit of campaign thunder.

The chancellor's reply to Kerrl had not been published tonight, but he responded to Hugenberg with a guarded answer that far going financial reorganization would take place and the administrative apparatus would be simplified.

In the current campaign the Nazis and the Nationalists have had difficulty trying to explain why they support the Von Papen government when its financial measures are at least as severe as those that were so unpopular when Heinrich Bruening was chancellor.

Try to Stop Criticism.

In today's demands on the chancellor, political observers said, the two party spokesmen attempted to free the Nazis and the Nationalists from such criticism.

The conflict between the reich and the state government, resulting from the appointment of a federal commissioner with dictatorial powers over the state of Prussia, flared up again today when the federal council's subcommittee on broadcasting held a meeting and Chancellor von Papen sent to it delegates representing Prussia.

Headed by Bavaria, the various states challenged the federal government's right to instruct the Prussian government's delegates. The chancellor held that the delegates represented him as the acting premier of Prussia.

CHARGE OF ATTEMPT AT JURY TAMPERING DENIED IN LEA CASE

Asheville, N. C., July 27.—(AP)—Affidavits telling of alleged attempts to corrupt the jurors who convicted Col. Luke Lea of Nashville, his son, Luke Jr., and Wallace Davis of Asheville, last August of violating the bank laws were followed quickly by a denial that the defense sponsored them as a petition for a new trial for the three men was argued here today.

COL. LUKE LEA. [G. V. Buck Photo.]

Solicitor Zeb V. Nettles presented to Judge J. H. Clement, during argument of the petition, an affidavit from W. C. Flynn, saying he had been offered "every inducement" to impeach his verdict. Flynn, a member of the jury convicting the three men, did not say who offered him the inducements.

Other affidavits said financial offers were made in an effort to influence a juror in behalf of the defendants during the trial and to learn how a juror "stood" while the trial was under way.

Col. Lea, his attorneys and counsel for the younger Lea and Davis all entered sweeping denials they had made any attempt to bribe jurors or unlawfully influence the jury.

NEW SHAKEUP BY MUSSOLINI HITS 36 GOVERNORS

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 27.—On the eve of his 49th birthday, which he probably will celebrate, as usual, with his family on his farm in Romangnano, Premier Benito Mussolini today applied his broom to Italy's local government.

Prefects, or governors, of 36 out of the 92 provinces into which Italy is divided were shifted about or dismissed, according to the announcement tonight. These changes follow last week's cabinet reshuffle, in which five ministers and 11 undersecretaries lost their jobs.

Prefects of the provinces depend on Mussolini and are appointed by him as minister of the interior. A prefect is the highest authority in a provincial government. Thirteen were dismissed and 11 transferred to other posts. Four others were removed from their present offices, but will be kept on a waiting list, while 13 entirely new appointments were made.

Hits North Italy and Sicily.

The changes involve chiefly the provinces of northern Italy and Sicily. Notable among the changes are the prefects of Genoa, Bergamo, Ferrara, Mantua, Padua, Cremona, and Belluno.

It was announced that the changes were effected in accordance with a system of rotation in office and to strengthen weak spots in local governments. Changes are generally made annually, but not on this year's scale. This marks the third extensive change in officialdom since the beginning of the year, Mussolini early in January having also practically remodeled the directorate of the Fascist party.

Ends Regional Cultural Bodies.

Meanwhile the new ministers and undersecretaries named last week in cabinet changes have now all taken the oath of office and have been installed in their new jobs.

Apropos of today's provincial government changes, movements also were begun here to dissolve all regional cultural and social associations. Il Duce lent approval to this. He said there is no need to emphasize regional characteristics, as all inhabitants of the peninsula are now unified Italians.

AUSTRIANS GAG AT SWALLOWING LOAN BY LEAGUE

Diet Expected to Defeat Acceptance Today.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Austria, July 27.—Shabby and broke though Austria may be, members of parliament today indicated that they would not go so far as to accept the 43 million dollars voted as a loan by the league of nations a fortnight ago.

All parties, with the exception of the strong Christian socials, agreed that the country needs the money but that the terms of acceptance are too disgraceful. The respective leaders contended that the protocol of the loan makes Austria but a colony of the league and by forcing it to remain independent another 20 years robs it of any choice in determining whether it wishes union with Germany.

Diet Votes Today.

Tomorrow parliament will be called to vote upon acceptance of the loan. Until today it appeared that the government would get a small majority authorizing it to take the money and swallow the terms. This afternoon, however, some deputies changed their minds. They are members of the small Heimwehr Fascist bloc of eight votes which is needed by the government to swing acceptance. Their decision to vote against the loan practically assures the government's defeat since the conservative Pan-Germans and Socialists, who bitterly oppose the loan, and lacked only one vote to wreck it.

Germany was believed tonight to be largely responsible for Austria's strange behavior in turning its back on the hand that feeds it. At Geneva a fortnight ago the Germans refused to join the other big powers in signing the loan protocol. They disliked it because it forbids the "anschluss" [Austrian German union].

Berlin's Hand Seen.

Knowing that Heimwehr Fascist deputies held the balance of power in the Austrian parliament, Berlin is reported to have approached them through the German Fascists. Since the Heimwehr has become practically a Nazi organization in Austria, they are reported to have been convinced that they must defeat the loan to defy France and strengthen the German tie to Austria.

Alarmed at the probability of defeat Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss called in the Socialists today and begged support, but they refused. Both the trade union congress and the conservative Austro-German People's union applauded the refusal.

The Austrian chamber of commerce and big Austrian banks also hurriedly convoked a meeting and issued warning that "refusal to accept the loan means absolute disaster."

CLEAR OFFICERS OF BLAME FOR SHIP DISASTER

KIEL, Germany, July 27.—(AP)—Naval officials investigating the sinking yesterday of the German naval training ship Niobe, with a loss of 69 lives, declared today that neither the officers nor the crew were responsible for the disaster.

The ship, a three master windjammer, went down near Fehrman lightship off the coast of Holstein. Many of those who perished were cadets studying to be naval officers.

"When the squall struck the ship," one of the surviving cadets said, "the first officer had sufficient presence of mind to shout a command, 'All hands to starboard,' but it was too late. Scarcely thirty seconds later the Niobe was on the bottom of the sea."

Upshaw Here Today for Dry Campaign Meeting

A meeting of prohibition leaders, headed by William D. Upshaw, will be held in Chicago today to discuss campaign plans. Mr. Upshaw is the presidential candidate of the National Prohibition party. He left Indianapolis for Chicago last night. He is to hold a conference here with D. Leigh Colvin, general chairman, and Edward Blake, executive chairman in charge of western headquarters. Mr. Upshaw said that campaign plans will be discussed today. Later he will go to Madison to address the state dry convention tomorrow.

Chicago Financiers Help Colombia Improve Harbors

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PANAMA CITY, July 27.—Panama canal dredgemen, who have been laid off here in order to cut expenses, are going to Colombia where a national dredging department is being created. Colombia plans to dredge the harbors of Buena Ventura and Cartagena, and build four modern wharves at Cartagena. Chicago financiers are reported to be helping Colombia to raise the $18,000,000 which the improvements will cost.

To Be Bride Today

MARY LOU EITEL.
[Parsons Photo.]

A dispatch from Berlin last night stated that Mary Lou Eitel, daughter of Karl Eitel, proprietor of the Bismarck hotel, would be married in Berlin today to Karl Adlon, son of Louis Adlon, proprietor of the Adlon hotel, Berlin. The couple had planned to be married in Chicago next October. News of the change in their plans was confirmed here by Miss Eitel's uncle, Emil Eitel. He said the young couple would remain in Germany until next spring, when they will return here for the Century of Progress exposition.

OCEANS OF WINE READY TO FLOW IN A 'YEAR OR SO'

Optimists Acquire It Abroad; Await Day.

New York, July 27.—[Special.]—The Mouquins—that family famous in three generations; the Mouquins who introduced New York to bouillabaisse, to filet Bearnaise, and to tripe; the Mouquins who for thirteen years have waited for the passing of the prohibition law—have seen the writing on the Volstead wall.

The Mouquins, it was announced today, have bought and stored in France 1,000,000 gallons of French wine.

And Louis Mouquin Jr., third of the family, explained today that they expect to sell that wine in the United States within a year—quite legally—in two reopened restaurants on the old sites.

"A year may be a little optimistic, but it won't be more than eighteen months," he said.

The wines are St. Julien, St. Estephe, Château Margaux, Château Yquem, La Tour Blanche, Bordeaux and Burgundies of the lighter sort.

His father, Louis C. Mouquin, M. Mouquin said, placed the orders and arranged for storage on a tour of the French vineyards just completed, and the Mouquins hope to sell the liquor here, under some form of modification of the prohibition law, at $1.50 or $2 a bottle.

FIFTY CANADIAN JOBLESS TREK TO BESIEGE OTTAWA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, July 27.—Canada's first trek of unemployed to Ottawa to besiege government headquarters and demand relief continued today.

"All's well," was the bulletin received from "the hunger marchers," a group of about 50 unemployed who set out on foot yesterday from Verdun, industrial suburb of Montreal. They covered 32 miles yesterday and spent the night in the open fields at St. Eustache, a small town.

They plan to camp on the government's doorsteps like the United States bonus veterans at Washington. Many of the hunger marchers are Canadian war veterans.

Robs Office Half Block from a Police Station

A gunman last night entered the offices of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois at 139 East 154th street, Harvey, a half block from the Harvey police station, threatened three employes, and fled with $200. Less than ten minutes before the robber appeared an armored car crew had removed $3,000 of the company's funds.

King Carol to Ask Peasant Leader to Become Premier

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 27.—(AP)—Juliu Maniu, leader of the National Peasant party, was summoned today to luncheon with King Carol. It was expected he would be asked to take over the post of premier in the

ASSEMBLY TOLD DRY LAW AIDS FARM INDUSTRY

Repeal of the prohibition law would only intensify the depression among the farmers, Charles L. Stewart, chief of agricultural economics at the University of Illinois, asserted yesterday at the Chicagoland dry assembly at the Des Plaines camp ground.

"For every $100 of manufactured products the liquor industry spent $23.33 for raw materials," Mr. Stewart said. "No other important industry paid so small a proportion for raw materials. In proportion to capital invested the liquor industry employed fewer men than any of seventeen leading industries, excepting the iron and steel blast furnace industry.

"Grain used in distilled and fermented spirits in 1917 was something less than 70 pounds per capita. On the other hand, the per capita consumption of dairy products was 754.8 pounds in 1917 and 907 pounds in 1927, an increase of approximately one-fourth since prohibition went into effect.

Addressing the evening assembly, Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, president of the New York State W. C. T. U., declared that in her judgment the sentiment of the American people for prohibition has not changed.

Aggregate attendance at the assembly to date has been 10,000, it was announced. Robert E. Corradinie of New York, associated with Prof. Irving Fisher in the Foundation of Narcotics Research, will speak today.

COURT UPHOLDS CONVICTION OF 2 EX-POLICEMEN

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the conviction of two former Chicago policemen, Wellington Britton and James Howland, both colored, for conspiracy to violate the anti-narcotic law. They were convicted by a jury in the district court and sentenced to two years each by Judge John P. Barnes.

Testimony revealed that they conspired with Jackie Reynolds, owner of a taxicab company, and James Claiborne, both colored, to hijack 13 grains of smuggled morphine from Billy Poole and Joseph Campbell, Negroes. Reynolds and Claiborne testified for the government and were placed on probation. Charges against Poole and Campbell are still pending.

"The conspiracy was planned and executed with a precision and deftness which stamps the participants as past masters of the art of hijacking," said the opinion of Judge Samuel Alschuler of the Court of Appeals.

Fifteen Blind Men Hear Blind Defendant Arraigned

Fifteen blind men, all carrying white canes, appeared yesterday in the court of Judge Thomas A. Green to hear the arraignment of Samuel G. Rowe, 42 years old, also blind, on a charge of begging on city streets. Judge Green continued the case until Aug. 15 and sent Rowe to the Psychopathic hospital for examination.

DISARM TO WIN U. S. AID, EDGE TELLS HERRIOT

PARIS, July 27.—(AP)—The basis of coöperation between Europe and the United States lies in disarmament, Ambassador Walter E. Edge, who recently returned from Washington, was understood to have told Premier Herriot today.

Their conversation covered Franco-American relations, the embassy announcement said, but did not include discussion of the debts.

Mr. Edge impressed upon the premier that the Americans feel keenly about disarmament and that if Europe wants American aid a good way to get it is by disarming.

Today Hudson proudly presents the ESSEX TERRAPLANE

What a Car!—and the lowest-priced Six in America!

$425 and up, f.o.b. Detroit

Back of the ESSEX TERRAPLANE is not only more than 200,000 miles of road-testing, but the experience and capacity of Hudson, one of the oldest and most progressive manufacturers in the automobile industry—a company which for nearly a quarter-century has been distinguished by advanced engineering, sound manufacturing and dependable value in all its products

Not only a new model but a new kind of automobile!

What the world in time to come will recognize as the first and original "post-depression type of motor car" dates from July 21, 1932.

For on this day herewith is offered the ESSEX TERRAPLANE—as fresh and modern and unhackneyed in comparison with existing designs as is the wafer-thin watch to the ancient turnip, the 4-ounce fly-rod to the clumsy bamboo, the 20-gauge trap-gun to the old smoothbore.

You have never seen an automobile like it. It patterns a brand-new school.

It heralds something thrilling and new in highway travel—a skimming, dashing, mile-eating, safely close-to-the-road swift smooth motion such as has not been enjoyed before except in planing on the water or in the air.

Here is power set free—suave six-cylindered pneumounted power—unfettered of deadweight—vibrationless as a jar of jelly upon the pantry shelf.

Here is big-car roominess, heavy-car "road-sense", costly-car comfort, small-car hardbitten Scotch thrift—in an amazing performer of an automobile that's feather-light to handle and sheer fun to drive.

Here is a new physical sensation in motoring which rests solidly on inspired engineering, and which cannot be captured on paper by camera or linotype.

Get out on the road and TERRAPLANE if you want to know how it feels to ride in V-16 fashion at a price that's actually down among and UNDER the former lowest-priced Three!

HOOVER'S OFFICE COSTS $391,657 OVER COOLIDGE'S

Has More Secretaries and Automobiles.

House had been transferred to the treasury department under the claim that the White House police belonged to the secret service.

Incidentally, the police force had undergone complete reorganization. Instead of a first sergeant, three sergeants, and 35 men, which had been sufficient for years, it was increased to comprise a captain, a lieutenant, three sergeants, and 43 privates. The cost of its maintenance rose to $119,799 a year, as against $85,900 in former years, once it was transferred from the White House budget to the treasury department.

The fiscal year 1932 witnessed the following in White House costs: Three secretaries, $30,000; office staff, $96,180; contingent expenses, $43,500; printing and binding, $2,700; traveling and entertainment, $25,000; care and maintenance of the White House, $185,000. The $119,799 for the White House police again was charged against the treasury department.

Expenses for Present Year.

Appropriations for the present fiscal year include $30,000 for three secretaries; office staff, including the salary of a fourth secretary, $90,000; contingent expenses, $35,000; printing and binding, $2,000; traveling and entertainment, $20,000; care and maintenance of the White House, $125,000, plus $119,799 for the police, still charged against the treasury.

Soon after President Hoover took office he discontinued the Mayflower as a presidential yacht. The claim was made that it cost $600,000 a year to maintain the yacht. But it was useless as a naval vessel and was ordered sold. Several bids of upwards of $50,000 were turned down, and one night the historic ship burned and sank at her pier in Philadelphia. She was sold for junk for a trifle more than $16,000.

So far as could be learned, the only saving was in the cost of keeping her fit and the cost of her fuel, most of which was used on the infrequent occasions the President took short cruises. Her naval personnel was transferred to other ships and her marine contingent, increased from about 30 men to 200, according to navy department officials, now guards President Hoover's fishing camp in the Blue Ridge mountains.

Marines Build Hoover's Camp.

The Rapidan camp was built by the marines, while army engineers constructed a road to it from the Madison valley up the mountains at a cost estimated to run between $150,000 and $200,000. A White House announcement a year ago said President Hoover personally paid for the material for construction of the cabins in his camp. Requests for information at the navy department and war department for the cost of services of marines and engineers to the government were refused. When the same request was made of the White House it was said it would require some days to answer it.

If the navy department's figures on the strength of the marine guard at the camp are correct, it costs approximately $10,000 a month to maintain them there for the four or six months the President uses the camp. A smaller guard is maintained throughout the winter. It seems apparent, therefore, that the economy resulting from the sinking of the Mayflower at least is wiped out by the cost of building and maintaining the President's Rapidan camp.

Cars Not Purchased.

The cost of maintaining and operating the 11 automobiles of the White House establishment comes out of the appropriation for contingent expenses. There are two cars—an open and a closed model—for Mr. Hoover, one for Mrs. Hoover, one each for the four secretaries, two for the secret service men who guard the President, a station car, and a utility truck.

Each of the passenger cars is replaced with a new one annually but the government does not purchase them. It rents them for a nominal amount from the manufacturers of fine cars who supply them on these terms for the sake of the advertising value of White House use of their products. Furthermore, the manufacturers are able to sell the White House used cars at a handsome profit to persons who take pride in driving a car in which a president has or may have ridden.

When President Coolidge retired from office he purchased the car he had used for the last year after some brisk bargaining in which he beat the company down to a figure which was a small fraction of the car's original cost.

GERMAN SEA FLYERS PLANNING TO ARRIVE HERE ON SATURDAY

A telegram received by the German consulate yesterday from Montreal said that the trans-Atlantic flyer, Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, and his three companions expect to arrive in Chicago late Saturday afternoon, completing their flight from List, on the Island of Sylt, off the coast of Germany. They will land their seaplane, the Groenland Wal, in the lake and dock at the ramp at the foot of 8th street, in Grant park, the message said.

Plans for the reception of Capt. von Gronau and his companions are being completed by the German pilot's Chicago representative, Mrs. Arthur Packard, and a volunteer committee of German Americans headed by Capt. George H. Weideling. Mrs. Packard said that Capt. von Gronau and his aids will stay at the Bismark hotel, and will probably remain in the city about a week. The German pilot plans to deliver several lectures here before leaving for the west coast.

The reception at the ramp planned by Capt. Weideling's committee will include the attendance of groups from many German singing and gymnastic societies. The flyers will be escorted to the city hall, where they will be greeted by a representative of the mayor.

Austria Opens a Paradise for Wooden Nickel Owners

KLAGENFURT, Austria, July 27.—(AP)—They're taking wooden money in the province of Carinthia, where many farmers have not enough coin of the realm to pay their taxes. The government announced today that those who had no cash could pay in pine or beechwood at approximately the market price.

DENOUNCE U. S. SEED LOANS AS FARM LIABILITY

Big Crops and Low Prices Predicted.

Government seed loans made all over the country through the department of agriculture by the Reconstruction Finance corporation were criticized yesterday by P. C. Miller and E. F. Johnson, officers of Albert Miller & Co., 303 West Washington street, jobbers of farm produce.

Mr. Miller and Mr. Johnson said they have found that substantial farmers throughout the middle west are disturbed by the prospect of having the produce markets flooded by the crops of the more irresponsible type of farmers who have obtained financing from the government which they could not get from local bankers.

Borrowers "Not Good Risks."

"The majority of the loans have been made to farmers who cannot get backing from their local bankers," Mr. Johnson said. "They are not good risks, and there is grave doubt that much more than 50 per cent of the loans will ever be repaid. There are only a few exceptions in which the federal loans have aided farmers in districts where local banking facilities have failed.

"While the farm board is working to stabilize production, the seed loans are opening the flood gates to an unprecedented volume of production, which is sure to appear when prices for produce reach the point where the substantial farmers can begin to make a profit. Meanwhile the government is supporting irresponsible growers through the loans until that condition arises.

Sees Bankruptcy for Many.

"If there had been no seed loans some 40,000 or 50,000 farmers would have been unable to plant their total full acreage this year, but would have produced enough to live on and carry on. Due to the loans, however, a large number of farmers will be forced into bankruptcy by the low prices sure to prevail.

"They will be added to the long lists of seed loan borrowers next year, and that list will continue to grow as long as the vicious circle of the government attempting to regulate supply and demand exists."

THREE STEEPLES HIT BY LIGHTNING BOLTS IN NEW YORK CITY

New York, July 27.—(AP)—Lightning struck three church steeples during a sudden electrical storm that drove temperatures down from oppressive levels tonight.

A marble cross was toppled from a spire of the Rockefeller sponsored Riverside church at 122d street and Riverside drive. Pedestrians, huddled in doorways to escape the pelting rain, were not touched by the shattering fragments.

Another bolt sent a shower of bricks tumbling down from the steeple of Grace Protestant Episcopal church on City Island. The Salem Methodist Episcopal church, at 129th street and 7th avenue, also was struck.

Damage was slight in each case.

A fourth bolt struck a flagpole in the grounds of the Catholic protectory in the Bronx, snapping it in two.

The new coins, which eventually will replace the present quarter of a dollar, are being put out in commemoration of the Washington bicentennial and bear the likeness of the first President.

Farmer Held on Charge of Attacking Housekeeper

J. J. Crain, 62 years old, owner of a farm just west of Lake Forest, was held to the grand jury yesterday in bond of $5,000 by Justice of the Peace Edwin Burgess of Lake Forest, on a charge of rape. Mrs. Mazie Witt, 43 years old, who had been employed for the last week as Crain's housekeeper, testified that he attacked her.

REVEALS POLICE BEHIND COMPANY BONDING TAXIS

Lawyer Cites 'Secret' Cab Monopoly Law.

A number of policemen assigned to the vehicle bureau, which has broad powers in regulating the taxicab business in Chicago, were among the incorporators of the insurance company which writes indemnity bonds for the 1,300 drivers of the Checker Taxi company, a council subcommittee was told yesterday.

This statement and the discovery that a taxicab monopoly ordinance was slipped through the city council nearly three years ago, although it did not appear in the council journal until a few months ago, roused a heated debate in the committee meeting, which prevented any extended discussion of the new taxi monopoly ordinance which the subcommittee convened to consider.

Several aldermen attacked the provisions of the "secret" ordinance charging that it was being used to prevent operation of independent taxicabs, and Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th] declared that he would introduce a repealer in the council today.

Attorney Makes Charge.

The charges that policemen, who in their official capacity regulate the activities of cab drivers are, in a private capacity, selling insurance to the same drivers, was made by Attorney Lee Daniels. He is counsel for the Public Taxi service, an organization of independent cab drivers, who, he said, were having difficulty in getting permits to operate from Lieut. James Killackey, head of the vehicle bureau.

Attorney Daniels charged that Policemen William McEvoy, Fred R. Heiden, Michael Chambers, Arthur J. George, Henry Ruick, Emil B. Schafer, Charles P. Dillon, and John McCambridge, all of whom, he said, are assigned to the vehicle bureau, were among the incorporators of the Lake Shore Mutual Insurance company. That company, he said, writes the bonds for Checker taxi drivers, under the state law which requires each taxicab driver to post a $2,500 bond as protection of his passengers in case of accidents.

Ruick and Schafer, it was said later at the vehicle bureau, were formerly assigned there, but are now retired from the police department.

Names Found in Records.

Records in the office of the secretary of state at Springfield showed that all of the names mentioned by Attorney Daniels appeared as incorporators of the insurance company, with the exception of Ruick's. There was, however, a Henry Rinck listed as an incorporator.

The insurance company was incorporated on Dec. 2, 1931, and empowered to write all kinds of automobile insurance. Its place of business was given as 1401 West Jackson boulevard. That is the headquarters of the Checker Taxi company.

In addition to those named by Attorney Daniels, the following appear on the records as incorporators of the company: Robert E. Jeske, Edward Meltrager, H. J. Weber, Stanley Stapner, James W. Evoy, Gordon C. W. Richardson, Clifford J. Gordon, B. U. Bothe, David R. Tomei, Joseph C. O'Brien, A. M. Cohen, Irving C. Jackson, George A. Egan, and Joseph McMath.

Policeman Chambers denied that he had any connection with the insurance company. Policeman Heiden asserted that his only connection was that he had insured his own automobile with it "because the rates were low."

Ald. Thomas J. Terrell [29th], chairman of one of the subcommittees which is considering the taxi monopoly ordinance to limit the number of cabs in Chicago to 4,600, announced at the opening of the meeting that a similar measure was already on the statute books.

It was introduced by Ald. Joseph Higgins Smith [32d] and passed by the council on Sept. 5, 1929. It did not appear in the journal of the council, however, until April 14 of this year.

In addition to limiting the number of taxicabs in Chicago to those in operation at the time of passage, which was 5,289, it gives the public vehicle license commission almost autocratic powers in licensing new cabs.

Although the ordinance was only recently put on the public records, the vehicle license commission, of which Lieut. Killackey is a member and secretary, has been operating under its provisions since its passage in 1929, Attorney Daniels said. He charged that scores of independent cab drivers have been refused licenses to operate under its provisions, and added the charge that attorneys for the Yellow Cab company and Chicago Cab company have been present at hearings at which the independents were refused licenses.

"I've been a member of this committee for six years," declared Ald. Nelson, "and I'm sure that there was never a committee hearing on that ordinance. Some one pulled a fast one. It must have been jammed through in the omnibus."

"WHEAT QUEEN" SAYS: KICK OUT THE FARM BOARD

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kansas City, Mo., July 27.—[Special.]—Wheat raisers and farmer owned co-ops told the Shannon congressional committee today that American agriculture was being driven to the wall and the cities pushed on the rocks by the operations of the federal farm board.

From the inside, Lawrence Farlow of Bloomington, Ill., a former director and former secretary of the Farmers National Grain corporation, a farm board subsidiary, testified that it is an effort to establish a government controlled monopoly.

This ten million dollar farm board agency, with a shoestring paid up capital of only $72,000 but with loans from the government now standing at $16,000,00, on ten year terms, secured by collaterals which are still a mystery on which the Shannon inquiry is craving enlightenment, was said by its former secretary to have depressed the price of wheat by its methods in piling up surplus grain.

Wheat Queen and King.

From the Kansas wheat fields came the day's two star witnesses. They were the "world's wheat queen," Mrs. Ida Watkins of Sublette, Kas., and the "Kansas wheat king," Albert Weaver, of Bird City. The queen and the king proved the most emphatic critics of the farm board and its subsidiaries, and they remarked their utterances were mild compared with sentiment now raging among the farmers in the wheat belt where "everybody is cussing government in business."

Queen Watkins, who as a girl was a cow puncher in the 90's and now runs 5,000 acres of wheat land, proved the sensation of the hearing. She rolled up her black silk sleeve and exhibited a muscular, sun bronzed arm. "If you don't think I'm a real dirt farmer and wheat shoveler," said the queen, "take a look at that arm.

"I left the harvest field to attend this hearing. The day I got the call to come here I was out shoveling wheat, saving $2 a day doing it. I've got 40,000 bushels in storage.

Blames Government Interference.

Asked by M. W. Borders what she blamed for farm depression, the eyes of the queen blazed.

"The doggone, damnable government interference in our affairs and our business by the government causes our depression," she said. "Maybe it isn't dignified to use the word damnable, but it's nothing compared with the cussing out in the wheat fields against the farm board.

"I'm holding 40,000 bushels of wheat, and have to keep on shoveling it to keep it from sprouting or getting musty and deteriorating, and the mortgages are going to take ever acre of my land if something doesn't happen soon.

"I trusted in God and the farm board and built large granaries to store my wheat, and have been working hard shoveling the grain. I owe on that wheat. While as yet I have had no foreclosures, I've been talking like a sailor, stalling off my banker. If the farm board stays with us much longer we'll soon be through producing.

Responsible for Depression.

"Throughout Kansas you hear people cussing the farm board, but still they are trying in every way to make an honest living and to exist. The Kansas farmers hold the farm board responsible for encouraging depression. It has not only driven agriculture towards bankruptcy, but it is shoving the cities on the rocks. How can Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis get along while depression continues out in the wheat, corn and cattle country? The cities and the country are both in the same boat."

The wheat queen of the world remarked, in response to an inquiry from Chairman Joseph B. Shannon, that she was a lifelong Republican and had listened in to both Republican and Democratic national conventions over W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station.

"I'm against Hoover," Mrs. Watkins said, pounding the table. "I'm for Roosevelt if he doesn't plan any farm relief legislation. I believed in Hoover four years ago and listened to the farm board advice and built granaries to house my grain and wait for higher prices. I was scared Al Smith would be elected. I thought Hoover would help. Now we're on the rocks. If Al Smith were running this fall I'd sure vote for him."

Asked for Remedy.

"What do you think should be done?" asked Chairman Shannon.

"Kick out the farm board," said the wheat queen. "Why, in common sense, can't congress and the President wake up and abolish the farm board? The dirt farmer is sick of being the pawn of politicians, who hold out luring promises for higher and more profitable prices.

"Congress pays too much attention to men who represent themselves as leaders of agriculture. If you think these payrollers speak for Kansas farmers just come out to our state and listen for yourselves. We farmers, business men, and taxpayers are paying for this fool experiment. From Jue, 1929, every line of business began to go to ruination.

"The purchasing power of the people is gone. Our farms and homes by the thousands and tens of thousands have been foreclosed and will be foreclosed more each day and all taken away from us. We have no prices for anything we produce, so we cannot purchase food, clothing, or machinery or any necessities in life. We have no credit. The confidence of the people has been destroyed with this damnable farm board experiment on the people with the people's money.

"Government has no place in our business. We know how to take care of ourselves and that is all we want. Leave us alone. We are not afraid of industry getting the best of us. There is too much competition now for that. If we can't receive profitable prices from one industry, we can from another. We want open, competitive markets for the disposition of our products."

"Wheat King" Gives Views.

Wheat King Kane said he had lived in Kansas 45 years and was the largest continuous independent wheat producer in that state.

"I own about 13,000 acres and one grain elevator," he said. "I have produced as high as 115,000 bushels of wheat a year. I now have 40,000 bushels, of which 10,000 is held over from last year.

"Let us consider just one of these highly paid government 'relievers,' George S. Milnor of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, the farm board subsidiary. Although we find that he was a small miller of small income before he started relieving us farmers, his salary for the government group was quickly ballooned to the startling sum of $50,000 a year.

"Now, down here in the southwest, we are getting about 28 cents a bushel for our wheat on the farm. In Kansas the wheat is running on an average of only about ten bushels an acre. To pay the salary of this one government farm reliever, the farmers must plant, care for and harvest some 17,800 acres of wheat land, in many cases using not only the farmer but his wife and children. It takes about 1,000 farmers and their families to produce the wheat necessary to pay the salary of this one head of the army of farm relievers.

"Is it any wonder farmers are seeing red? When the farm board started competing with private business and wrecking markets, wheat was well over the dollar mark on the farm."

Illinois Official Testifies.

Coercive methods directed against farmer owned coöperatives by the farm board were dwelt on by Thomas R. Cain of Jacksonville, Ill., president of the Farmers' National Grain Dealers' association, with 900,000 farmer stockholders and patrons, said to be the largest coöperative group in the country. He assailed Secretary Hyde for opposing Illinois farmers in their demand that the board of trade make No. 2 yellow hard wheat deliverable on contract.

"Thousands of farmers made the demand, which the Board of Trade acceded to despite Hyde's threat against the exchange if it did so," said Mr. Cain. "We let Hyde know that we Illinois farmers were not afraid of him.

"All of this has been direct competition with independent farmer elevator units by the payrollers of the farm board units. Some time ago I made the statement that seven out of ten farmers were against the farm board. My farmer members jumped on me about it. Now I am convinced that at least 35 per cent of the farmers are against the farm board.

"We do not want the law amended. We want it repealed. We want the farm board abolished."

ADMITS MURDER OF CANAL VICTIM IN "SPEAK" DEAL

George Sanders, 55, years old, of 538 North Dearborn street, whose body was found Monday in the Illinois-Michigan canal near Channahon, in Will county, was revealed as a murder victim yesterday by one of the slayers. He was killed for his money—$206.

The story of the slaying was told to Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan by Claire Lyngen, 26 years old. He named two brothers, Morris Canfield, an ex-convict, and Lawrence Canfield, a beer flat owner, as the actual murderers. They are being sought.

"Sanders wanted to buy a beer flat," confessed Lyngen, "and I introduced him to Morris Canfield. It was agreed that Lawrence would sell him him his 'speak' at 916 Oakwood boule-Ten days ago Sanders took over the place and three days later paid Canfield $250."

In paying Canfield, Sanders revealed that he had more money, Lyngen said, and that night he and the Canfields drove Sanders into Will county, where they shot Sanders and tossed his body into the canal after taking $206 from his pocket.

The Canfields and Lyngen returned to the scene last Sunday, recovered the body, weighted it down with a post for better concealment. The body came loose, however, floated to the surface and was discovered. Secret information next sent police to the Oakwood boulevard beer flat, resulting in the arrest of Mrs. Lawrence Canfield and Lyngen and the latter's confession yesterday.

The viaducts through which they will pass have already been completed, and other work in connection with the project is to be started at once. [Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 27.—An appeal which the prince of Wales addressed to the youth of Great Britain recently, exhorting them to arise and help save the country has fructified in a new political party. The party's immediate aim is to right matters in Liverpool, where it originated.

John Gell, 23, secretary and spokesman, declared that the party is putting three candidates for alderman in the Liverpool field. The chief points of the party program are rapid clearance of slums, occupational centers for unemployed, reduction of interest rates on city loans, Sunday amusements, and a new tariff director.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

FOR A REAL TAXPAYERS' ASSOCIATION.

Day by day THE TRIBUNE has been publishing lists of properties on which taxes have not been paid. These lists are read with indignation by many of those who have paid their taxes. Those who have paid are in countless instances no better able to spare the money than those who have not.

It is curious that the real taxpayers, by which is meant, of course, those property owners who really pay, have formed no organization at this time. The others have. The so-called Real Estate Taxpayers' association is a misnomer. It is composed not of taxpayers but of tax evaders and tax dodgers.

The real taxpayers have been singularly passive through all this trying period. They have paid, and paid heavily, but they have formed no organization to defend their interests. The tax evaders are in conflict with the real taxpayers no less than with the unpaid public employés and contractors. The refusal of some to pay taxes has crippled the services of government. The man who has paid his taxes is getting less from the local governments than he is entitled to and the man who has not paid is getting service for nothing.

Nor is that the whole story. The failure of some to pay has led to defaults in bond issues which will cost the community heavily. Bonds of some Chicago governments for years to come will sell at a discount because of the record of default. The property owner who has paid his taxes will have to shoulder his share of that additional cost, although he had no part in creating the additional burden.

This county needs a strong organization of real as distinguished from bogus taxpayers. A real taxpayers' association would have a twofold purpose. It would press for prompt action in the courts to force the delinquents to pay or lose their property. And it would demand reductions in taxes to the point where property owners could carry the load. No association of nonpayers can achieve that result if only because the members do not come into the controversy over government expenses with clean hands. A property owner who pays nothing can raise only a feeble complaint against the tax rates. They could be twice as high or half as high and it would make no difference to him. The real taxpayers are under no such handicap. They ought to have a voice and a powerful one in determining the fiscal policies of the local governments. The failure to organize the real taxpayers into a militant body is costing this community heavily.

AN ALIMONY VICTIM.

A veteran captain of the Chicago fire department, retired, died the other day in a hospital shortly after his release from jail, where he had been lodged for failure to pay alimony to a woman he had married in his later years. He had spunk enough to refuse to pay over his pension, but that cost him his liberty, and his physician said that the jail diet, in his invalid condition, apparently cost him some years of life.

The marriage was evidently an old man's mistake and the administration of alimony law made it an additionally serious one for him. The first consequence was an unhappy home and the second an implacable marital responsibility which brought a life of usefulness to a dismal close in jail. Few alimony cases are more obviously unpleasant to the sense of justice.

It is natural for such law to have such consequences. There is back of it a medieval assumption that the woman is property and that the man is responsible for her upkeep regardless of circumstances and sometimes regardless even of her conduct. It is the further assumption that the man who has had this ball and chain clamped on him and can't or won't carry it is an enemy of society and is properly jailed as if he were a criminal. All this ignores every other theory which has been worked out in the modern status of woman.

BUREAUCRACY ON THE AIR.

The Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' association has just exposed a situation which not only the American newspaper fraternity but the general public has reason to consider seriously. It illustrates strikingly the trend of government interference in private enterprise and the growth of bureaucratic control of the commodity most essential to the preservation of self-government, publicity.

In Pennsylvania there is maintained what is called the Capitol Clip Sheet, an official organ of publicity which purports to inform the citizens of the commonwealth what its government is doing for their welfare. In a recent hearing on radio broadcasts it appears that each state department has a publicity agent whose duty it is to see that the merits of the department are not overlooked by the indifferent citizenry. The matter proposed by these agents goes to the editor of the Clip Sheet, who approves or disapproves or amends it. If the matter is of a political nature it is also submitted to the publicity agent of the governor's personal staff. If it passes these various agencies it is passed on to the newspapers.

There is also a state police radio station. It broadcasts the officially censored news of government activities. The unofficial broadcasting stations and newspapers have protested the broadcasting of government censored or doctored information, declaring, we think rightly, that "control of channels of public information by government agencies, which control carries with it the dangerous power of censorship, directly involves the freedom of the press and the air."

The protestants demand that the government station, called the state police station, be placed on the radio frequency band reserved for police service only, and then offer to make free time available to the police for police announcements of general interest.

It will be interesting to see whether the system of government controlled publicity in Pennsylvania meets the approval of its citizens. The possibilities of radio broadcasting of official self-praise and propaganda are considerable. If Pennsylvania will submit to it it will be popular with politicians in power elsewhere.

THE STRANGE FATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

Corporation Counsel Sexton explains that the federal aid made available by the relief bill is in the form of an advance and not a loan. It is an anticipation of a subsidy which the federal government contemplates continuing. In this case it is the road fund. Beginning in 1935 the federal bookkeeper will withhold from a state's road subsidy a proportion of the money advanced to it for relief of its poor.

In this way the idea that the federal government shall support the states is more firmly implanted in the American scheme. The emergency to which the tax paying states have been reduced by their own folly and the exactions of the federal government has betrayed them to the bureaucratic growth which is their disaster. They will be delivered to the subsidy doctrine by their own obligations to Washington. Their representatives will be obliged to vote the federal grants to the almshouse states because repayment of the debt is contained in them.

A less satisfactory prospect can hardly be imagined. An out of hand gift of the money to the states would be one episode. It would be a most unfortunate one, but it would not lay a heavy hand on the future. Explanations and apologies could be undertaken to put it in its best light. The federal government, having gathered in the available resources of the country, has beggared even the self-sustaining states this year.

The road subsidy is one of the elements in this beggaring. No argument can make the policy sensible or equitable. With a sense of dread many Americans see the federal government discarding its proper limitations and gathering strange powers in its hands. They see the balance between the states and the Union destroyed. They see states now depending on congress as counties depend on a state legislature. They see the individual man and productive resources in their private corporate form drawn under management and direction by federal commissions and boards.

Although the forms of political democracy do not seem to have been changed, the substance of social democracy is disappearing. Although franchise extensions have been numerous in this generation, including direct nominations, direct election of senators and woman suffrage, nevertheless this is the generation which also has seen the greatest loss in American freedom and the greatest expansion of government control. The individual was never more government ridden in the United States than he is today when he was about to congratulate himself that at last there was a government on earth completely responsible to the people it governed.

BEATING THE LAW.

On May 2 a small restaurant was held up. Two days later the robbers were identified by one of their victims. The complaining witnesses have been in court 24 times since then. Each time some reason for a continuance was advanced and continuance granted.

This is no unique experience of witnesses against criminals in our court proceedings. It is, in fact, an old story, and it exemplifies one of the most serious weaknesses of our defense against crime. By interminable delays the force of testimony is gradually weakened, complainants and other witnesses upon which the prosecution must depend grow discouraged or are subjected in some serious cases to threats or other pressure and fail to appear when needed, and thus prosecutions which, if promptly brought to issue, would result in conviction dribble out to failure.

In many such cases there is conspiracy to defeat justice, the workings of the alliance of crime and corrupt politics. In some cases, no doubt, there is only slack administration, but both produce results entirely to the profit of crime and to the discredit of the law. Responsibility for such proceedings rests not only upon the individuals who work subterraneously to create them but chiefly upon the officials elected by the people to administer and enforce the laws for their protection. The public will get faithful and alert protection only as they watch the record and punish the ineffective conduct of office at the polls.

Editorial of the Day

PAYING HIS WAY.
[Grand Rapids Press.]

Mr. Average Motorist travels 232 miles per day while on tour, according to a government survey recently completed. He averages 14.38 miles on a gallon of gasoline, which means he uses about sixteen gallons on his day's trip. Under Michigan's three cent gasoline levy the average tourist contributes nearly fifty cents a day to the state.

Ten thousand tourists on the move in Michigan every day would mean about $150,000 added to the state's coffers in a month. The state certainly is more than repaid for its contribution to the advertising of Michigan's tourist and resort interests. And it probably receives also more than enough to cover the costs of other activities which improve and protect our nation's playground. Yet the gasoline tax is only a small part of the daily expenditure of the tourist within our boundaries.

BETTER LUCK TOMORROW.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. W. B.

OLD MAN DEPRESSION seems to be getting quite a few thumps right on the bean these days, and Old Man Prosperity, while he hasn't come around from behind that corner, is sticking his head out and looking around. And to demonstrate further that things are undeniably looking up a man said to us yesterday as we stood waiting for a Boul Mich bus: "Here's a quarter that was lying on the ground right behind your foot. It must be yours." And absolutely to prove that conditions have changed for the better consider our answer: "Nope, we didn't drop any money. If you found it, then it's yours." Which simply settles the matter.

BYRON WAS WRONG.

"There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,"
Provided you've a guide.
"There is a rapture on the lonely shore,"
Beware a strong rip tide.

"I love not man the less, but Nature more,"
Well said, of pregnant meaning.
And, too, mosquito screening.

A fine apostrophe!
But a good pilot and stout timbers make
For greater safety.

"Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain"
May not be strictly true.
But shortened canvas is a wise provision
When tempests brew.

That's easily seen.
The Submarine

No longer is the ruin now confined
Merely to land.
This urge to kill extends at length
Beyond the strand.

Byron as well as other bards
Require revision.
"The world do move" and poets must Have more precision.

LONDON IS TERRIBLY EXCITED over a mystery shipment of one million eight hundred thousand dollars in gold which left England yesterday for New York. Nobody knows who sent all that gold out of England or why. Maybe Uncle Andy Mellon, who has just arrived in Washington on his annual vacation, slung the stuff out of his suitcase on the way to the wharf because it was too heavy to lug around, and the British, who have no sense of humor, picked it up and are returning it.

STOP! WE CAN'T BEAR IT!

Sir: A contributor writes to Doc Evans about birthmarks, claiming that they are caused by the mother receiving a shock of some kind before the child is born. The good doctor, on the contrary, refutes this theory, stating that scientific investigation has absolutely proved it to be without foundation in fact.

The writer can cite an instance where this actually occurred. A number of years ago a young married couple were motoring through Yellowstone park and had camped for the night. Early next morning the husband had gone over to a trout stream to catch some fish while his wife was preparing breakfast on the camp stove. A large bear, which are plentiful in the park, but not harmful unless molested, attracted by the smell of food, came out of the bushes and ambled toward her. The wife was frightened into hysterics and when later on she became a mother the child was born with bare feet. SANDY.

"FRANCE," said Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, minister of national defense of Germany, over the radio, "possesses a girdle of fortresses no army in the world can penetrate." Well, the general ought to know.

IN THE NEWS OF THE DAY we find that Representative Tilson of Connecticut, who is resigning from congress because the job costs more than the pay, is "now summering in Vermont." Which is all very well even if we find out next January that Congressman Tilson is wintering in Vermont. But suppose along in March we are told that he is "springing" in Vermont. Even this September the horrible intelligence may flash over the wires that Representative Tilson is "falling in Vermont." For somebody or other to be "autumning in Vermont" wouldn't be so shocking. But for a congressman or anybody to be "falling in Vermont" would be an awful catastrophe to the English language. Something ought to be done about this.

PROTECTION.

You say, "If only I might lift today
The curtain of tomorrow, I would frame
Conditions now to meet the coming fray
Or plan avoidance of events too tame."

Pooh-pooh! Such plotting would not leave you free
To do today the tasks that should be done
And if tomorrow held a grief for me
I know my courage would take heels and run.

How to Keep Well By Dr. W. A. Evans

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual disease.

WATCH YOUR BEAR MEAT.

It may be true that domestication has increased the prevalence of disease among lower animals, but, even so, it cannot be charged with all the trouble. In sections of Africa epidemics of sleeping sickness wipe out nearly all the larger game at times. A few years ago, in northwestern Canada, there was a devastating epidemic among wild rabbits. Tularemia is prevalent among rabbits throughout the United States. Many birds are subject to diseases which they also spread. Even the hardiness of the English sparrow does not make that troublesome bird an exception to the rule.

Trichinosis is supposed to be a disease of domesticated hogs. When human beings contract it the probability is that they have recently eaten raw or insufficiently cured hog meat. It has been proved that some wild game animals are subject to this disease. Hunters have been known to contract it from eating some of the specimens of their prowess.

Dr. A. T. Walker writes of treating a family of five for trichinosis caused by eating bear meat. A member of the family went hunting. He killed a 400 pound bear, an apparently healthy specimen. That was a good deal of meat and it was decided to save most of it by drying. In the west this process is known as jerking. Jerked meat is eaten either cooked or raw. Since the hunter was proud of his feat and since there was plenty of meat he was generous to his friends. It is estimated that fifty persons ate of this nourishing and appetizing food. Probably most of them were wise enough to cook it before serving, but in the family mentioned the children chewed and ate a good deal of the uncooked jerky. Of this family five developed trichinosis and one died.

The disease started a good deal as typhoid fever does. For one week after the meal there was no evidence of any trouble. In some instances this incubation period was as long as three weeks. During this time the young worms were maturing and propagating in the digestive tract of the host. The eggs laid there were being hatched. When the new crop of worms was ready they began to bore their way through the tissues and then the symptoms began.

The fever had some of the characteristics of typhoid, but Widal tests of the blood were negative. In some there were pains and aching in the back and legs, and this was much more severe than is expected in typhoid fever. However, one of the five did not have these pains. Puffiness under the eyes is a valuable sign, but in this group of cases that symptom was not dependable, being absent in half of them. One case died promptly and this incited the physicians to make all kinds of blood counts and other tests. They soon found that they were dealing not with typhoid fever but with trichinosis. When the bear meat was examined under the microscope plenty of the worms were found.

HALITOSIS.

Miserable writes: I am very unhappy as I have halitosis. I am 18 years old, considered pretty, good company, etc. So far I have managed not to offend people. I am certain of that because I have a few very close girl friends who would certainly tell me if they thought I had bad breath. Another thing that assures me is that my boy friends keep calling me and taking me out. You might wonder how I do it. Somehow I manage to keep something in my mouth, whether it be chewing gum (which I dislike), candy, etc. I also gargle, but it helps for only a short time. I am perfectly healthy except that I am constipated. Even when I do manage to keep my bowels moving regularly for a week I still have bad breath. I try to eat a lot of vegetables, drink lots of water, and take mineral oil.

REPLY.

The first difficulty is in being certain that you have halitosis. Ask your mother to settle that question for you. The next is in finding the cause. Halitosis may be due to ozena (a nose disease), to bad teeth and gums, to cheesy particles in the tonsils, or to a heavily coated tongue. You can judge of the condition of your tongue, teeth, and gums. You may be able to see masses in the crypts of the tonsils. Ozena may be beyond your capacity to observe and diagnose. The odors due to this group of offenders are more offensive than those due to digestive conditions. In addition, they are apt to be present all the time. Most of the cases of halitosis result from putrefactions in the lower part of the digestive tract. The odors of this group are sweetish, have something of an ether quality, and are pleasing to some persons but unpleasant to most. They are apt to vary from day to day, there being periods when no odor is noticeable. Prevention of odors of this type lies in changing the diet and the bowel habits.

REVERSE PERISTALSIS.

B. H. writes: Will you please explain peristalsis and reverse peristalsis? What causes the latter?

REPLY.

Peristalsis is the wormlike movement in the digestive tract which keeps the food moving along as it is digested and absorbed. If it reverses and moves the food in the opposite direction the act is called reverse peristalsis. Vomiting, nausea, some belching is the result of reverse peristalsis. Among the causes of this trouble are adhesions, obstructions, constrictions, constipation, cancer, ulcer, and gallstones. There are others.

BLEEDING GUMS.

A Reader writes: What causes gums to bleed when no pressure is exerted on them? What can be done to correct this?

REPLY.

There are several causes. An important one is scurvy. Another is pyorrhea. One that is not often encountered now is mercury poisoning.

OWNER WARNED.

Chicago, July 23.—[Friend of the People.]—Nearby on Addison street stands a three story frame building in a state of utter ruin. It has reached the stage where daily some part of it is being torn away—by whom one can never see; it just disappears as if by magic—until the very high front stairs have been entirely spirited away, leaving the railings hanging in midair. Plaster and other debris are all over the neighboring sidewalks. This building, what is left of it, is a disgrace to the city of Chicago. It is a fire hazard and a menace to health. Is this wreck to stand during the year 1933 when we ask our countrymen to come here and see progress and beauty? My efforts to rid our district of this eyesore and menace to everything decent have proved fruitless. I am looking to you for help. J. M.

The owner has been notified to board up all openings, remove all loose parts, put the premises in good and safe condition, or wreck the building.

JOHN E. ERICSSON,

WATER MAINS.

Chicago, July 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I own four lots in the 5700 block on South Normandy avenue. Unless the city lays water supply mains this year I will have to give them up in despair for taxes. When, if ever, are they going to lay these mains? J. V.

An assessment roll for a cast iron water supply pipe in South Normandy avenue from West 56th street to West 59th street, Docket No. 52189—Warrant No. 55169, was confirmed in the County court and bids will be opened for the construction of this pipe on July 26, 1932. Unless the bids are excessive, the contract for this work will be awarded and the water pipe laid this year.

B. F. LINDHEIMER, President,

DEPENDS MOSTLY ON WORDING.

Chicago, July 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like some legal information regarding a will probated in Iowa last year. The contents of the will are as follows: The father dies and leaves all his property [90 per cent in real estate] to his wife for the duration of her life. On her death property is to be equally divided between two brothers. Now if one brother should die before the mother, would his share go to his wife [no children] or to the surviving brother upon the death of the mother? The mother now only has a life estate. D. R.

It seems probable that the wording of the will is such that the interests of the brothers are now vested in which case they will descend to the heirs of one of the brothers are now vested, in which case they of much value without having the wording of the will before us.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PERSONAL INJURIES.

Chicago, July 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My husband had the tips of two fingers cut off by a punch press. Now after eight weeks of idleness, during four of which he was able to work, his employers have told him that his services are no longer required. 1. Is there a law compelling the company to take a man back for a certain length of time after he has been hurt in their employ? 2. Would my husband have a case if he took it to court? A. S. F.

1. No.
2. As we understand it the accident arose out of and in the course of his employment and hence is covered by the compensation act. Liability under the compensation act excludes the possibility of recovering by an ordinary suit at law. In order to recover under the compensation act your husband would have to show that he notified the employer within 30 days after the accident and would have to bring proceedings within six months.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 28, 1916.

LONDON.—The British went after Delville wood again and captured it. The Germans had been quiet because the British made no infantry attack, but all the while the machine guns had been rattling and the artillery had kept up a thunderous drum beat in what before this offensive would have been referred to as a violent artillery duel. This morning the British put on Delville wood the heaviest concentration of shell fire in a given area ever directed against field fortifications.

LONDON.—The battle of Brody is still raging with terrific fury and it is the Austrians and not the Russians who have announced that Russia is gaining. The retreat of the Austrian forces near Leshlow, about twelve miles north of Brody, under the battering of Russian attacks was the chief development of the day. This retreat p.. the Russians still further in the rear of the left flank of Gen. von Linsingen's army and makes it almost certain that another retreat all along the line to a point miles south of Brody will come soon. Following this the Russians will be in striking distance of Lemberg. To the north of Brody along the Slonovka and Boldunronka rivers, where the fighting has been bloody for four days, the battle for the crossings of the rivers is still going on. At Berestechk, further north, the Germans report a Russian repulse.

ROME.—The official statement covering operations against the Austrians given out by the war office reads: "Yesterday on several sections of the front the enemy's artillery was particularly active against towns and villages in the Asiago basin, the upper Boite and Degano valleys. Some places on the lower Isonzo also were bombarded. The damage was slight."

CHICAGO. — The weather bureau gave no hope of a breakup today of the heat blanket that hangs over Chicago, Illinois, and neighboring states. Street level thermometers at 4 o'clock this morning announced a temperature of 87 degrees. Street level thermometers at noon yesterday in Chicago registered 103. Eighteen deaths were attributed to the heat and forty-five prostrations were reported.

WASHINGTON.—France, Italy, and Russia are already standing behind the British trade blacklist of American firms, it was learned today. This means that Great Britain can make no complete answer to the American note of protest until there has been time to confer with her allies and obtain their consent to concessions, if concessions are to be made.

CHICAGO.—Cy De Vry is not going to leave his animals in Lincoln park and his thousands of children friends in Chicago if Gov. Edward F. Dunne can keep him there and the governor thinks he will be kept. The governor, who appoints the Lincoln park board, stated that if the laws seem to make it difficult for the board to pay De Vry a decent salary he will be one of several public spirited citizens to go down in his own pocket and make up the deficiency the board hesitates to provide until such time as the laws can be amended to pay De Vry what he is worth.

THE SHORT WORK DAY.

Chicago, July 22.—The depression is still with us and no one knows when it will end. Immediate relief which the citizens of this country would rightfully expect is not forthcoming from congress. They are at loggerheads over every vital question affecting employment or such proposals that would have the effect of alleviating the present unemployment conditions. Their failure is causing the unemployed to be maintained out of charity or dole (a ruination to the country), instead of work which the people want. It is impossible to create work other than that that is available now without increasing the tax burden. There is only one solution and that is distribution of the present work for all the people. This would necessitate shortening of working hours so that perhaps the people would be working one-half time for a period of a month or two until our surplus of labor is taken up. Labor will create a market and eventually will adjust itself into perhaps a five day week, six hours per day. Money will be put in circulation, taxes which at present cannot be paid will then be paid, and wages will rise again. This country to avoid serious consequences must take the leadership and other countries must follow, and if not we have our tariff for protection.

WILLIAM JOERN.

AS BETWEEN EVILS.

Chicago, July 21.—I would like to say to G. H. H., "The Other Side from Wisconsin," that we had better have men like Kreuger and our Wall street than men like Stalin.

We can easily learn to leave the Kreugers and our Wall street alone, but we could learn nothing from Stalin and his gang. The human race ought not to choose to remain dumbheads forever, especially after the constitution of these United States is paid for.

After all, the principal thing is wisdom—regardless of its cost. Just think of what we are learning by having "the noble experiment"! It's better than a college course and through it the whole world is going to a free school.

THE FOREIGN NEWS.

Chicago, July 22.—In these days when so many events of importance are transpiring in Europe as well as Asia it is gratifying to have a paper like THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, which presents to its readers all of the important foreign news. So many papers feel that their readers are interested only in local news, such as local politics, divorce scandals, and the like, that they discard ninetenths of the news items from foreign countries.

Your paper not only presents all of the foreign news, but frequently, I have noticed, gives feature articles on the same by noted writers. I want THE TRIBUNE to know that a large number of its readers are interested in foreign news and deeply appreciate this fine service.

AN OREGON CHRISTMAS IDEA.

Chicago, July 22.—As an economy and cheer providing measure, what do you think of the adoption of a plan that Portland, Ore., has for the provision of presents for the needy children at Christmas time? The plan is this: Every year after Christmas the "outgrown" toys and games are taken to the local fire engine house, where they are reconditioned by the firemen and volunteer workmen during their leisure hours. The expense is very little and the various organizations of the communities are glad to contribute to such a cause.

Competitive "pre-distribution" displays add much to the interest and publicity of the movement. It is not too late to begin such a plan now.

BAD TASTE.

Such a change in name would obviously be a vulgar display of bad taste; would be an outrageous act of vandalism against midwest tradition and sentiment, and would certainly not result in redeeming any unsavory spots—if there be such—on Clark street.

The visitors to the World's Fair next year will form a better opinion of Chicago if Chicago will be Chicago and not try to be New York, Boston, London, Paris, or Berlin. ERNEST BRADSHAW.

LET NEW YORK HAVE IT.

Chicago, July 22.—Felicitations to your artist, Mr. Orr, on his recent cartoon covering the proposed change of name of three famous old city streets.

That cartoon scored a bull's-eye in sharpshooting. Imagine the elimination of such grand old Chicago names as Clark, Wentworth, and Vincennes for such an inane and totally inadequate substitute as Broadway!

The name Broadway has been associated with New York City for generations, and its connotations are those of the fast life of a great city.

Our adoption of it would indicate that we are so immature in our outlook that we must steal another city's copyright name in the hope that we might achieve a cosmopolitan standing.

How puerile the thought and how hopelessly suburban! As a native Chicagoan I should be sorry to see such a proposal adopted and I sincerely hope that THE TRIBUNE will make a fight against that misguided effort which, if successful, would give Chicago a second rate standing in the roster of American cities and would make of her a laughing stock throughout the length and breadth of the land.

WILLIAM D. O'BYRNE.

PLAYING THE YELLOW.

Chicago, July 21.—At 6:15 p. m. today I was driving west on Irving Park boulevard near Crawford avenue when the following incident took place:

A street car started to cross Irving Park northbound on Crawford an instant before the lights began to change. The lights were green for the car as it moved forward. Then a black sedan, driven by a woman of 40 and without other occupants, started west on Irving Park to cross Crawford on the yellow light.

The street car and the sedan came together. The woman accused the motorman of going "against the lights." The motorman had not gone against the lights, but the woman had. As for the street car, everybody knows that motormen who violate traffic signals are mighty few and far between. There's a reason.

My point is this: Many people in Chicago take the attitude that they have a right to dart ahead on the yellow light when the signal is going from red to green. But the fellow on the other street must not continue through on yellow when the lights for him are going from green to red.

In some cities to start forward on the yellow light is to invite arrest. Let's be fair to the other fellow and save our own "tinware" at the same time. Don't play the yellow. C. W. AGNEW.

WHY TEACHERS SHOUT.

Oak Park, Ill., July 22.—Mr. William S. Johnston, president of the City Firemen's association, in an article in your paper Wednesday claims that the teachers have been browbeating the city officials.

Will this Mr. Johnston please inform us how many firemen are still being owed by the city their salary for June, 1931, in addition to their salary for the last half of March, all of April, May and June of 1932? Also, how many city employés have had to accept two months' pay, May and December, 1931, in tax warrants which many of us had to discount 25 to 30 per cent? Why shouldn't we shout? JUST A TEACHER.

A LAW PROFESSOR.

Chicago, July 25.—How come a man who defends the 18th amendment as a proper expression of the American constitutional system or even as consistent with the nature of municipal law a professor in a law school? T. H.

Book Reveals the Troubles of Newly Rich

THE three novels to be reviewed today, though in many ways very dissimilar, resemble one another in their emphasis on problems and their concentration on complex human relationships. Each one carries some sort of moral, obvious or less obvious, and starts out with the intention of teaching a lesson as well as portraying life in some of its aspects.

NANETTE KUTNER.

"Middle Class," by Nanette Kutner [Long and Smith], with its subtitle, "A Novel of Morals and Money," describes the effects the sudden inheritance of money has on a group of about ten people, all in one way or another related. There is Cora who, before the inheritance of the fortune, has always ruled over her family and relatives because she was rich. Now she is no richer than the rest and she finds her consolation, to the disgust of the family, in a gigolo.

Her daughter, a hideous, repulsive girl, concentrates her repressed affections on the communists, wayward girls, etc., upon whom she lavishes her personal fortune. Hattie, the possessive mother of Lorraine, realizes that she no longer holds the purse strings and that she must face her daughter's asserted independence.

Belle, the almost offensively beautiful wife of Harry, when she inherits her share of the money, runs away with her nephew by marriage and leaves her daughter to marry into an old and decadent New York family. Donald, the son of Maggie and Jim, his head turned by the money he has received, treats his sweet, very simple and girlish wife with complete unscrupulousness until there is a reckoning.

So it goes. Each member of this family suffers from the inheritance of the money. One or two of them get themselves in hand before it is too late, but even then sudden fortune has had a corrosive effect on their characters.

"Middle Class" may not be remembered long, but while it is remembered the reader will lend his admiration to the crisp, acid, if oftentimes distorted and superficial characterizations.

The style is not distinctive and the plot, on the whole credible, is guilty of a few impossible extravagances—for instance, the end of the story—for which we have not been prepared and which seems a cheap and easy way of making the circle vicious.

"Mrs. Green's Daughter-in-Law," by Nelia Gardner White [Stokes], comes with her husband to visit. Laurie and Luther have been secretly married for a year and in that time have suffered over the birth of their dead son and over the hatred of Laurie's parents. Kit, who has been married to Julie for six years, decides to come to visit his mother at the same time. Mrs. Green's two other children, Matt and Elizabeth, who are twins and somewhat bohemian, also leave the city to spend several weeks in the country with their mother.

The author, with this setting, presents the reader with a complex and interesting situation. Kit loves his selfish, beautiful wife passionately, but Julie is obviously sick of Kit. She devotes her attention to the quiet and scholarly Luther and manages to make every one miserable about it. Luther is a susceptible young man, though he really loves his wife, Laurie.

Matt falls desperately in love with Laurie but runs away from her because he knows he would only bring unhappiness to all of them. Thus the author describes the cross currents of human emotions, jealousy, hate, love, envy, touching, mingling, separating, leaving ripples of discontent and dissatisfaction.

Mrs. Green, the mother, is the real heroine of the book. She plays a quiet but effective part in the story. Laurie is by far the most interesting character and she is drawn effectively and subtly. "Mrs. Green's Daughter-in-Law" is above the average in the field of the novel. It is a good book.

Evans Wall, author of "No Nation Girl," has written in "Marriage Rite" (King) a very different type of story from the half caste novels of which his "No Nation Girl" is an example. The present novel concerns the "to-do" that is made about sex in the rich circles in a gulf town. Lois is disturbed about her husband, Bryan, who is regularly unfaithful to her.

She decides to try out the infidelity business for herself. She has an affair with handsome Dr. Alan Kent. She and her husband are suddenly brought very close together and all thoughts of other men and women vanish. She is to bear a child by Alan, she believes, since her husband has been unable to give her one for four years. She almost dies and the doctors despair of her life, but Alan comes flying and all is well.

The characters are, in no memorable instance, real, but are the author's appointed spokesmen for the message which he feels an urgent necessity to give. Sometimes the book comes to life, but for the most part it is wooden and the conclusion is far from convincing either aesthetically or philosophically. M. D.

Slips for Hot Days Acquire New Meaning

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Optimistic shoppers in search of cool summer lingerie will be rewarded with a collection of new costume slips that are the answer to demands of suffering females who want less than nothing under their frocks.

Some kindred soul who also has wilted and stifled with too many underlayers on a scorching summer day has invented a slip that is everything in one piece. All the trifling bits and wisps of lingerie that we women, martyr-like, wind round our heated anatomies have been replaced with one grand and glorious garment that they still call a slip.

These come in flesh and white, trimmed with lace, and instead of a simple hemstitched band around the top of the bodice, a perfect uplift brassiere is attached, with the necessary elastic at the back to make it fit flawlessly.

Not content with that trick top, the designers also made it shadowproof with a cleverly cut triangle sewed Vionnet-like in V formation on the lower front of the skirt. This efficient, modest and biasly cut slip is yours for a song. Because of its extremely low price and the fact that dressing becomes a matter of a few minutes with this comfortable and cool slip, these models should be the talk of the fashion world. Others with panties attached are just as amazingly low priced.

No one can resist the new sheer nightgowns. They are made of a soft blue and flesh color and wee puff sleeves merely cover your shoulders. The waist line is high and accented with a ribbon and the shallow neckline rounded demurely and edged with lace completes the quaint charm of these filmy cool creations.

One ensemble affair consisting of a matching combination and nightgown is perfect for a late summer trousseau. Sea green indestructible voile is used for the flared lower portion, while shell pink voile is used in slender triangular sleeves for the nightgown and as the contrasting brasserie top in the combination. Nothing could be cooler to look at or more refreshing to wear.

Indescribably thin dotted net in all pastel shades and black are ready for the shopper of cool summer time negligees. They are long with deep ruffles from the knees to the floor and ruffles around the elbow length sleeves and the surplice neckline. Inch wide silk ribbon in lovely shades of salmon pink, robin's egg blue and jade green are used for belts and sash effects.

Striped silk tailored dressing gowns, quite masculine in design but deliciously feminine in colored stripes against the clear white backgrounds, make ideal traveling and vacation models. Huge pockets and a narrow belt and a masculine well fitted color mark them as practical but decorative accessories for the summer wardrobe.

There are some exceptionally brilliant lounging pajamas with price tags that will be a surprise, good looking coin dotted silk, with white dots splashed against a vivid red or old blue background. Short bolero jackets with short sleeves are included. Printed silk pajamas with a deep circular collar and gay two tone sash are other moderately marked bargains for the prowling clothes hound.

Corner Stone of Artaxerxes' Palace Is Found

U. of C. Expedition Restores Xerxes' Harem.

THE foundation document of Artaxerxes I., in which the Persian monarch records completion of the Hall of a Hundred Columns, greatest of the palaces at Persepolis, has been discovered by the Persian expedition of the Oriental institute of the University of Chicago, it was announced yesterday by Dr. James Henry Breasted, director of the institute. Dr. Ernst E. Herzfeld, field director of the expedition, reported the discovery by cablegram.

The Persian foundation document corresponds to the modern corner stone and records facts concerning the ancestry and achievements of the building ruler. Excavations at Persepolis were started by the expedition in hopes of finding the building records. The first was unearthed seven months ago from the harem palace of Xerxes, father of Artaxerxes. The marble slab bore a new 40 line inscription in Old Persian cuneiform writing and recorded important facts regarding the ancestry and accession of Xerxes.

The new discovery will add similar information concerning Artaxerxes, who succeeded to the throne of Persia when his father was assassinated in 465 B. C., Dr. Breasted said. The text of the inscription on the new document was not included in the cablegram.

Dr. Breasted said that the discovery of the second foundation document leaves but little doubt that such a record will be found under each of the buildings at Persepolis. The expedition is engaged at present in clearing away the mud brick walls of the great Hall of a Hundred Columns, the purpose of which has not been discovered.

The work of restoration of the harem palace of Xerxes has been practically completed, Dr. Breasted revealed. The rear two-thirds of the building contained six apartments, identical in floor plan, each intended for one of the monarch's six beauties. The front was occupied by a royal apartment.

"The excavations have revealed important new facts regarding the origin of this vast group of imposing Persian palaces," Dr. Breasted said. "The great palace terrace is nearly a third of a mile long and a thousand feet wide, so that the area occupied by the palace buildings is about 130,000 square meters.

"The expedition has discovered that this enormous terrace was systematically laid out and the positions of the buildings determined in advance, so that before they were erected the engineers could lay out a vast drainage system. The conduits and down spouts to carry off the rain water from each building already were in place before the buildings were begun."

Designers' Convention Decrees Return of Peg-Top Trousers

New York, July 27.—(AP)—A return of the peg-top trousers, contemporary of the tandem bicycle and the Floradora sextet, was decreed today by the International Association of Clothing Designers, holding its annual convention.

And the well dressed man, if he follows the designers' dictum, will leave his tuxedo in the summer moth balls. Tails, they decided, will be worn almost exclusively at formal functions. They found that collegiate disuse has killed the popularity of the dinner coat.

About those peg-top trousers: The bottoms will be narrow and the tops pleated. The coats to go with them will have accentuated waists and the broad shoulders of this year.

Polo coats, the designers expect, will be worn extensively. Materials of suits will be softer and colors duller.

100 White Sox Fans' Letters to Be Chosen Today

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

If you are as anxious as I am, boys and girls, to see that thrilling baseball game between the Chicago White Sox and the New York Yankees a week from today I hope your letter is in my morning mail. You know, I shall read them today and select the hundred boys and girls who are to be my guests. The lucky ones will find their names in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

It's the day of our big party at the Century of Progress exposition, too. I hope the winners are all set for a big time of thrills and excitement—for that's the kind of a party it's going to be. Alligators, rides, a high diving act, archery and a tour of a few of the interesting buildings at the fair grounds are some of the things we have planned.

You have your invitations by now and you know all about our plans for meeting. One thing you don't know, however, is that we are to ride from our meeting place to the actual location of the party in those new Greyhound buses—long, open, gay affairs which will provide a treat in themselves.

With so much to look forward to, I hope that nothing happens to prevent your attending the party. However, if you discover that you cannot come please telephone me at THE TRIBUNE this morning.

New Vanity Fair on North Side Invites a Visit

"Outdoor" Gardens May Be Quickly Moved Inside.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Out north, on the corner of Broadway and Grace street, the Vanity Fair Outdoor gardens invites a visit and gives pretty good reason why the invitation should be accepted. It is on the site of the former Marigold gardens, and for that matter of other gardens dating back to the anti-Volsteadian era, wherefore it carries on old traditions in presenting itself as a place of pleasant entertainment.

Rebuilt, redecorated, recently reopened, it bids defiance to weather conditions by being two places in one, an outdoor inclosure for pleasant evenings and a spacious inclosed room to which everything may be transferred at short notice in case of rain. Whether under the roof or under the skies, the visitor finds that line and color scheme have been studied to good effect for the purpose of pleasing the eye.

It is traditional, too, in its manner of entertainment. There is opportunity to dine and dance to the strains of a toe-tickling orchestra, and at intervals in the course of the evening the space is cleared for a floor show. Earl Rickard is the master of ceremonies, a person of suave jest and wisecrack, who is quite likely to stop the show when he takes the center as singer instead of announcer.

Elsewhere there is exhibition dancing of several varieties, but always lively, seemly, and in good taste. A complex, if brief, tango quite topped the bill the night that the Vanity Fair was visited, though these ears were unable to catch the names of the participants. Interspersed among the dancers are singers, one of whom, Jack House, deals effectively and to the great pleasure of the patrons with an extended group of well known songs, old and new.

Industry Tells Its Story in California Parade of Shriners

San Francisco, Cal., July 27.—(AP)—California business told its story in float and pageantry today in the second of the big parade spectacles of Shrine week here.

In quieter surroundings the Imperial council, governing body of the ancient Arabic order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, balloted for officers. In accordance with custom each officer except the recorder and secretary was moved up one step.

The one vacancy at the bottom, the post of imperial outer guard, was filled with election of Thomas C. Laws of Atlanta, Ga., past potentate of Yaarab temple. In ordinary progression he will become imperial potentate in 1944.

Party Raises $250 for Camp at Algonquin

Camp Algonquin officials and in particular Mrs. Astrid Save, superintendent, are still talking about a windfall that reached the camp recently in the form of a $250 check to be used for those necessary incidentals the budget is compelled to omit in a lean year.

The gift followed a bridge party given for Camp Algonquin's benefit at the residence of Mrs. Robert W. Buckley at Brookmoor, in Barrington, which is only seven miles from the camp. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Russell Pettengill and Mrs. Potter Lewis Smith, heading a committee of Barrington women who had become interested in the extra needs of the vacationers from the stuffy tenements of Chicago.

Only three contributors, however, sent their checks to the Camp Algonquin fund in care of THE TRIBUNE yesterday. Five dollars each came from William C. Stone and A. Ferguson, and $2 from J. L. Murphy. This brought the grand total to $4,838.58.

The Free Ice Fund was the recipient of more generous support. A check for $25 was sent by Emily S. Picher of Hubbard Woods. Other gifts came from:

$2—Mrs. Edward Gudeman. From a Friend.
$1—Anonymous, Mrs. E. C. M., A. Ritchie.
Total—$52.40.
Previously acknowledged—$1,358.10.
Grand total—$1,410.50.

Gifts are especially urged for the Free Ice Fund because the need among destitute families has increased beyond bounds. Your gift, however small, will help, as it costs only seven and a half cents a day per family to keep food fresh and the baby's milk from souring.

Chicago Woman's Club to Organize Weed Cutting Drive

A weed cutting campaign will be organized at a luncheon meeting today of the Chicago Woman's club hay fever prevention committee. Representatives of the suburban health commissioners and the Chicago health department, who have agreed to cooperate; the governor's relief commission, department of public works, and the Good-Will industries have been invited to the luncheon.

Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE; Dr. Bernard Fautus, a professor in the University of Illinois medical school, and Dr. Siegfried Maurer of the department of pathology at the University of Chicago, are assisting the committee in efforts to eradicate weeds in Chicago and suburbs as an aid to hay fever victims.

Boat Takes Mothers to Michigan Camp Today

The third group of underprivileged mothers and children to be sent this summer to Lake View camp, conducted by the Volunteers of America near Benton Harbor, Mich., will depart this morning. They will leave at 10 o'clock by boat from Navy pier. The camp, among the first fresh air institutions, was founded 27 years ago. The Volunteers hope to send more than the usual 500 vacationers because of the increased need this year.

Helen Johnson Delays Debut Until Winter

BY JUDITH CASS.

HELEN JOHNSON, the daughter of the William B. Johnsons of Evanston, has decided to make her debut during the Christmas holidays instead of in September before she goes back to college, as she and her mother had planned last spring, and now the plan is to have her debut tea on Christmas day at the residence of her parents, 202 Greenwood boulevard.

Miss Johnson will return to Sarah Lawrence college at Bronxville, N. Y., this fall for her second year, but before she goes east she will have a vacation in the north woods with her parents and her brother, Norman, who will be a senior at Williams this year. The family is planning to go to northern Wisconsin about Aug. 15.

Roslyn Paine, daughter of the Walter G. Smiths of Evanston, who also will return to Sarah Lawrence for her second and last year—the course there is only through the second college year—this fall, has decided to postpone her debut until the following year when she will be at home and so will be able to enjoy the whole of her debutante season instead of just the holidays from college. Roslyn is spending the summer with her parents at their country place at Lawsonia on Green lake in Wisconsin, filling the house with young people almost every week-end.

Pauline Seipp May Postpone Debut a Year.

Another of those whose names have been on the tentative list of 1932 debutantes for some time and who is thinking of postponing her debut until 1933 is Pauline Seipp, daughter of the Edwin A. Seipps. Her mother reserved the date of Nov. 26 for a dinner dance some months ago, but now there is talk of waiting a year before having Pauline come out, for she is just 18, and her mother thinks it might be wiser to let her have another year at college before she fills her vacations with the ceaseless whirl of good times that is a debutante's life.

"Sub-debs" have a grand time, too, during the Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations, but their times are a little less hectic and their parties are not so late and so many as those of their debutante sisters. The Seipps are at their Barrington estate for the summer and will not come back to town to their residence at 2340 Lincoln Park West until fairly late in the fall, perhaps not until after Pauline has left for her sophomore year at Vassar. It might be that Mrs. Seipp would decide to give Pauline a tea in Barrington before she goes back to college if Mrs. Seipp does decide to introduce her daughter this year, but I have an idea pretty Pauline will be a 1933 deb, from the way Mrs. Seipp talked yesterday.

Caroline Eleanor Schofield Will Be Married Today.

Miss Caroline Eleanor Schofield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Schofield of Highland Park, and R. Hilliard Oborne of Pasadena will be married at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents. The ceremony will be a small quiet one, with only the immediate families present, and there will be no reception afterward. The bride will be given in marriage by her father, but neither she nor Mr. Oborne will have any attendants. They will reside in Pasadena.

Miss Peggy Hixon, daughter of the Robert Hixons of Lake Forest, is in Troy, N. Y., visiting a classmate at Farmington, Miss Hope Harrington. Numerous parties are being given for Miss Hixon in Troy and the nearby towns, including Sarasota, and last week-end the girls, chaperoned by Miss Harrington's mother, Mrs. W. Rae Harrington, went to West Point for a hop given by the cadets of the United States Military academy.

Mr. and Mrs. René Georges Le Brosi [Celeste Murphy Murdock] and the latter's son, John B. Murdock, are motoring westward from New York and will arrive in Chicago early next week for a visit with Mrs. Julius T. Benedict [Cecille Murphy] before going up to the woods of northern Wisconsin. Mrs. Benedict seldom goes away for a holiday during the warm weather because she thinks Chicago is the best summer resort in the world.

Mrs. Ford Harvey Leaves Lake Forest for England.

Mrs. Ford Harvey of Kansas City is en route to England after a few days' visit in Lake Forest with Mr. and Mrs. Byron S. Harvey. Mrs. Byron Harvey will depart on Aug. 6 to spend several weeks at Desbarats with the Philip B. Mahers.

The Russell Kelleys and the junior Harry B. Clows have taken the "Bert" Erskines' house at Desbarats for August and September and both families will be going up to that lovely place on Aug. 1. Life at Desbarats is lived mostly on and in the water, you know, with swimming, sailing, and motor boating the chief attractions, although there are tennis and all sorts of informal parties on land, too. Everything is very simple and comfortable and the country is beautiful, and, all in all, those who summer at Desbarats in Ontario think it is the ideal place for summer vacations.

Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway Watson of 1530 State parkway are among those who have chosen a dude ranch as the ideal place for a vacation this summer, and they are on one now near Cody, Wyo., for the rest of the season.

Robert F. Greenlees Off for New Mexico Ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fargo Greenlee departed last night to spend a month with Mr. Greenlee's parents, the William B. Greenlees, at their ranch in New Mexico. The young Greenlees are just back from having spent a year in Paris, where he studied at the National Museum of Natural History. In the fall they will re-

I Like You So Much

BY MAY EDGINTON

SYNOPSIS.

Gold Franklyn calls Dr. Elverton, who has a surgery in a poor district of London, to attend her indolent, dependent, young half brother. The doctor offers to give Barney Pierce, a well to do accident victim, a lift to his destination, and Pierce waits while the doctor makes his call. He catches a glimpse of the pretty creature who summoned the doctor. Both men determine to help the plucky young orphan girl. The doctor is to sail the next week to New York and Havana on a leave, taking the ship doctor's place. Mrs. Doria Hathaway, a widow friend of Pierce's, is to sail on the same boat. She wants a maid-companion for the Atlantic crossing. The doctor sends Gold to see Mrs. Hathaway and she gets the job. Pierce regrets putting Gold under the demoralizing influence of Doria. He decides to sail himself. On the boat Doria meets David Dorrance, who wants to interest Pierce in a business deal. Doria asks Gold to dine with her. They are joined by Pierce and Dorrance. Gold is angered by Pierce's cynicism and distrust of women. Gip Alen, Gold's half brother, stows away on the boat and threatens to disclose his identity unless Gold does as he bids. Pierce, who overhears Gip's threats, unknown to Gold, arranges to get him third class passage on condition he doesn't bother Gold. Dorrance offers Gold a position as his secretary on the Havana trip, which she gladly accepts. Doria invites a good looking youth from steerage to dine with her and give an exhibition tango. The youth is Gip Alen.

HUMILIATION.

The captain went on: "I do not know what story you have heard, but this man is no picturesque hero at all. He is just a young London clerk with no parents; who dislikes work and will sponge on anybody. That so, doctor?"

Doria was angry most of all with herself; but she turned on Gip: "How dare you! How dare you try to impose on me!"

"I like that! Who picked me up?"

"Don't brawl here," said the captain.

"Who picked me up, I say?"

Elverton said in his gentle voice: "I'll see Mrs. Hathaway back to her stateroom, sir, I think."

"Well," the captain answered, "this is going to be no place for her here when I talk to Mr. Alen."

So, quickly she was outside; she turned on the threshold to cry to Gip:

"If you thought you found a rich woman in me you've made a fool of yourself! I'm broke! I'm always broke! Always! All my friends know it. I saw through you from the first, but I wanted some decent dancing."

"Good-night, Mrs. Hathaway," said the captain.

So she was walking away, though not in the direction of her own stateroom, Elverton's hand on her elbow guiding her. She was humiliated to her depths. Those men's eyes! Hard and smiling, summing her up. She did not even wonder what the captain was saying to Gip Alen; did not know, nor want to know, how he was giving him his orders; how he was telling him in no measured terms that if he wanted any healthy prospect for himself, he would hold fast to the promise of that compassionate traveler who had—so incomprehensibly—offered to look after him. She did not hear the captain confirming—from his trained knowledge of all his passengers—her own statements about herself—that she was probably always broke. It was Barney Pierce who, in that brief conclave on the deck, had advised that this should be made clear to Gip; but she could not know that. She did not know nor care about the chastening of Gip Alen, nor anticipate ever seeing him again, nor guess at any arrangements that a man of steel—whom, people were used to say, you couldn't even bend—was making concerning him; nor why this man of steel should know him at all.

"I don't believe that you have ever in your life given any one anything, except your charms."

She was at this confused moment surprisingly concerned as to the value of her own stock in Elverton's eyes. He despised her? Did it matter? Wasn't he a poor man, and she had said she wouldn't touch such poor men with the end of a barge pole. But as she walked along blindly, guided by him, she continued to asseverate, trying for a casual voice: "I merely wanted a dancing partner. That's all."

Then they were inside his consulting room, the door closed. She looked around; it was very quiet. It gave her again that strange sense of haven.

For the sake of her own pride she did not want to think of Gip, but for the sake of probing for Elverton's thoughts of her she must continue:

"As I say, doctor, I only wanted a little good dancing. Real dancing; after all, I've been, to a certain extent, a professional dancer in my time. That was all I wanted."

"O, no," said Elverton, "you want very much more from life than that."

"Believe me, I think myself lucky," she flung out, "if I get as much as a little decent dancing from men."

"You have not thought."

There they stood, looking at each other. He was not a very tall man, but she was so much shorter that she had to look up at him.

"You overrate your mental activities when you use the word 'think' in relation to them," Elverton meditated aloud.

Doria Hathaway was nonplussed as much at her own lack of resentment as at his candor. She wanted to be angry and was only ashamed. And for the first time in her life weariness overtook her—not a physical but a spiritual weariness, though she sank into a chair like a woman bodily tired.

"Why should you talk like this to me?"

"Because I want to talk to you very much," said Elverton, standing over her, "and these are some of the first things I want to say."

"I've never met such a man!"

"You have never had any use for such a man."

"No," she said, at a loss for any other reply.

"I don't believe," said Elverton, "that you have ever in your life—not since you were a child anyway, and few children are mean—given any one anything, or offered any one anything, except your charms."

"A woman——"

"A woman should love giving."

"I don't know why you should talk to me like this!" she repeated.

"Because the second time I saw you—the first was for one minute on deck, the second when you were having a cocktail with Mr. Dorrance—I said to myself: 'There is a woman who should love a lot and give a lot. That woman should have children in her arms.'"

"Who's preaching? I was only explaining myself."

"Well, now you've explained, as you call it——"

"You want to go?"

Somehow he was between her and the door.

"I'll take you back to your stateroom," he said.

"I'm not going there. I'm going to the auction pool in the smokeroom."

She knew what she was going to do this very moment. She was going to gamble. She was going to sail in and show every one how little she cared for the evening's fiasco. She was going to bid as high as her last cent to "show" them.

"Are you going there?" said Elverton gravely. "Well, so be it. But I wanted to tell you that the captain was absolutely right about that boy. He is a sponger. He is going to be taken in hand, I think—and not for his own sake—but never mind that."

"I don't. I am not interested."

"When I first came across him," Elverton pursued, "he was trading on the devotion of a girl; no experienced woman like yourself, but a mere girl. She was practically starving herself for him; a very brave girl——"

"'Beautiful?'"

"Divine fool."

"Why should you want to see a woman with her back to the wall before you can admire?" she asked passionately.

He replied: "Her back to the wall—but her face to the world . . . we can worship a woman like that."

The tears in her downcast eyes were thick, and blurred his figure standing against the door; but she felt intuitively the movement that lifted her two hands, and held them against his lips.

"You should get to know yourself," said this strange man, that "poorish" doctor, "as I know you."

He opened the door and stood aside.

Editors Meet Film Stars at Movie Banquet

Young Autograph Hounds Swamp Celebrities.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., July 27.—[Special.]—Autograph hounds three and four deep, most of them under the age of 15, blocked all the main and side entrances to the Writers' club on Sunset boulevard yesterday when the Motion Picture Producers' association gave an outdoor midday banquet for 300 visiting members of the National Editorial association and had Conrad Nagel introduce 54 of filmdom's best known celebrities from a platform.

The biggest rush since 1849 took place when the stars started to leave. Each was engulfed in a sea of upthrust papers and pencils as he stepped out of the club grounds. While this went on outside, the actresses and actors were further circularized on the inside by wives of the editors and publishers, a bevy of whom buzzed around Clark Gable, while the kids swamped Tom Mix.

Janet Gaynor, Sari Maritza, and Ann Harding were three who took it good naturedly. John Miljan's car was parked a block and a half away and the whole distance to his automobile was a parade of juvenile and adult autograph seekers. Finally, when Miljan had written his last one, a spokesman for the children who had beset him inquired: "Say, Mister, what is your name, anyway!"

Louis B. Mayer, head of the Producers' association, made a short speech to the newspaper visitors and asked them to "help the motion picture industry, through your station with the newspapers of the country, to get a fair deal in Europe."

Clark Gable got a laugh when Conrad Nagel introduced him. "I felt," Gable said, "like the gentleman who came up to me at the Ambassador last night and said, 'I want to welcome you to California. My name is Smith, and I come from Maine.'"

Sid Grauman, the Hollywood theater impresario, also made a hit with the editors and their wives. He said: "If any one of you will go to the box office of my Chinese theater on Hollywood boulevard, and merely give his or her name, each doing so will be given a free seat to the showing of 'Strange Interlude.' There were 300 at the banquet, and Mr. Grauman was told to expect 2,000 requests for free seats.

Did you know that the Metro studio made Johnny Weissmuller, perhaps the world's greatest swimmer, use a double in some of the water scenes in "Tarzan of the Apes"? There were the scenes where Tarzan dives into the pool of crocodiles, and the studio did not want to take any chances of something happening to its star during the making of the picture, no matter what Johnny insisted.

Parents Should Be Interested in Young People

Home Is Place for Child's Friends.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Do you think it is right for me to meet my boy friends on the corner? My parents won't let me have any friends come to the house. They are not interested in my friends. I have to be home at ten every night. I am 18. Do you think it right? ETHEL."

When a girl asks if it is right to meet boy friends on the corner she asks out of a guilty knowledge that it isn't right! It isn't what a girl with any sense of propriety wants to do. And it isn't what any decent girl should be encouraged to do!

In nine cases out of ten when a girl does it, it is because her parents drive her to do it. The girl is not to be blamed. You cannot curb youth's desire to associate with the opposite sex. There's not one good reason why the desire should be curbed and many perfectly wholesome reasons for encouraging boy friendships at 18. But not in corner meetings. Not in neighbors' homes. Not with surreptitious datings heaven knows where!

Mother's job doesn't end with seeing her girl through public and high school. It doesn't end with the girl getting a first job. Perhaps at no other period to date does the mother's rôle become so important as at the teen age when the boy problem is vital to the girl. At 18 there is a young lady on your hands. Also, a rebellious little girl denied her rightful privileges. Try to keep her away from boy associates—and she'll find a way, herself, of meeting them.

You can't stem the tide of that desire. It's normal, it's healthy and it should be encouraged under the most favorable circumstances possible. Fathers are just as responsible as mothers here. It's parents' inescapable duty to see that their girls get through this period in the cleanest and happiest environment possible. Parents should be interested in their daughters' friends. They should be sympathetically interested, wisely interested in their daughters' friends. They should be sympathetically interested, wisely interested.

They should never be party or parties to driving a girl to meeting boy friends on the corner. Adult companionship does not suffice youth! You can't expect an 18 year old to enjoy people of her parents' age only Youth wants youth—and they have a perfect right to have it, regardless of parents' orders.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Let Him Explain.

"Dear Miss Blake: A boy I like made a date but didn't show up. Should I give him up? KITTY."

Find a New Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend and I broke off. He said he didn't like to go with one girl; he wanted variety. Do you think he really cared? BETTY."

Have you been noticing the small deep purple or black, sack shaped fruits that have been venturing onto the market now for several weeks—fruits that one finds on investigation to be none other than the well known fig, but fresh, plump, and juicy instead of wizened and chewy?

Fruit dealers tell me that few Anglo-Saxons in America ever buy this delectable fruit in its fresh state—that the trade is almost entirely composed of families which have first learned to appreciate its deliciousness in the warmer countries where a fig tree flourishes in every backyard. Which makes me—this minute munching on the pink and white lusciousness of an especially fine plump fellow—most regretful.

But just because we never have served fresh figs "as is" as a luncheon dessert . . . or stuffed fresh figs as a tasty salad . . . or three big fat figs with cream as a most appetizing breakfast starter . . . all this is no reason for not starting. For figs are a pleasantly flavored, sugarful, and mildly laxative fruit which may be eaten alone or combined in an amazing number of likable dishes. And fresh figs add a hundred more palate thrillers to the already discovered delights.

There is a bit of technique to be mastered in eating fresh figs at the table. With some figs the skin is not edible, so it has become the proper thing to hold the fruit by the stem end, and with a small, sharp knife cut from the opposite end up through the middle, then cut again at right angles to this cut, making both cuts up nearly to the stem end. The segments do not fall, but hang open slightly, allowing one to scrape the pulp from the skin in convenient sized bites.

BAKED FIGS.

As a tasty topping off for a simple vegetable luncheon, baked figs defy all comers. Simply wipe the figs carefully and stem them. Allow two or three per person, depending on the size of the fruit [and the person]. Place in a small earthenware casserole and sprinkle with a little sugar—about one-fourth teaspoon per fig. Sprinkle over them also the juice of one lemon and bake in a slow oven about forty minutes. No water will be needed. Serve with cream, plain or whipped, and slightly sweetened.

FRESH FIG WHIP.

Such an ethereally fluffy yet satisfying dessert as this does make! It's difficult to give proportions, since figs differ so in size. But take enough fig pulp to make one and one-half cups. This pulp is simply skinned, mashed fresh figs. Add sufficient sugar to sweeten to taste—about three tablespoons should suit—and let stand until the sugar is dissolved. Beat the whites of three eggs until light but not dry and fold into the sugared figs. Chill until cold and serve in frosty sherbet cups with cups of hot black tea.

STUFFED FIG SALAD.

Fig salad? Certainment! One of my best calls for large fresh figs, one to each salad eater. Stem, then carefully remove the pulp from the center, taking it out through the large end, but leaving a firm wall. Blend the pulp with finely ground pecans and moisten slightly with lemon juice. Sweeten to taste with heavy sugar sirup and stuff back into the fig skins, letting the extra amount round out at the open end, but be hidden by the curl of the lettuce cup in which each fig is served. Serve with whipped cream mayonnaise and sprinkle lightly with nuts.

Then one more fig special—this one for fig layer cake. The cake itself is simply your best and fluffiest three layer cake, flavored this time, with almond extract. The fig filling uses one and one-half pounds of fresh figs. Stem, wash, and take out the pulp; or, if skins are good, mash with skins on. Add one cup of water and two cups of sugar and cook gently until thick and clear. Add one teaspoon of vanilla, cool slightly and spread between the layers. If desired, ice over the whole cake with orange icing.

A FRIEND IN NEED

"I wonder if you can get a wheel chair for a fourteen year old girl through your column. She is an invalid and longs to be out of doors these summer days. As it is now, she must remain inside and life is pretty dull for her. "M. N."

If your child has had need of a wheel chair, but is now fully recovered, I know you'd like to have some one else experience the joy he or she found in owning a chair. This girl would be happy to get it.

Grace Nelson Gives Summer Artist Recital

Difficult Pieces Presented with Unexpected Charm.

Grace Nelson, who has more qualifications for public appearances than many who are greatly her senior, gave a piano recital at the Punch and Judy theater yesterday morning as an extra item in the summer artist series of the Chicago Musical college.

She is the possessor of a highly ingratiating talent. Her technical equipment permits her to be lithe, rapid and generally correct in the face of even such crabbed problems as the Paganini-Brahms Variations. Her mental approach to her music may be defined as that of intelligent sympathy, and this caused her to play the Bach-Liszt Prelude and Fugue in A minor with high distinction and also to present Ravel's seldom heard "Valses Nobles et Sentimentales" with unexpected charm.

Marie Sidenius Zendt, Chicago soprano, signalized her homecoming by appearing in Kimball hall yesterday afternoon and doing some of the best singing of her entire career. Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, and several more modern composers were sung with delightful voice, with polished style, and in the best of tradition.

The event was given under the auspices of the American Conservatory of Music, and her associate on the program was Edward Eigenschenck, organist. He deserves an equally high rating, being proficient in both the technic and the color of the instrument, and able to infuse a degree of enthusiasm into his playing which makes it unusually interesting. An overture by Hollins, a symphony by Widor, and shorter works by Vierne, De Falla, and Bach made up his part of the program.

The Symphonic and Opera Guild of Chicago, an orchestra of fifty former members of the Chicago Symphony and Chicago Civic Opera orchestras, will play a program on the roof garden of the Lawson Y. M. C. A., 30 West Chicago avenue, tonight at 8:15 o'clock. Isador Berger, founder and director of the organization, will conduct, and Miss Kirby Konner will be the vocal soloist.

P. A. Cavallo and his symphonic band will present a concert from the band shell in Grant park tomorrow night. A feature of the program will be a suite from "A Legend of Spain" by the Chicago composer, Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer. M. Manna, cornetist, will be the instrumental soloist, and Olga Saga, soprano; Frederick Mueller, tenor, and Giuseppe Mantovani, bass, will sing the Prison scene from Gounod's "Faust." E. M.

Thomas I. Underwoods Seeking Town Apartment.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers of 1100 Lake Shore drive have left for their summer place at Watch Hill, R. I.

Our newsgatherer in the White mountains writes that there was a large attendance at the third annual flower show of the White Mountain Garden club, held the other day at the Maplewood casino, and that the exhibits included many from the John G. M. Glessner estate, Mrs. Glessner being president of the club. Mrs. John J. Glessner is honorary president of the club and, although she is unable to attend the meetings, she takes an active interest in all the affairs of the club and lends her coöperation in every way.

A feature of the recet show was an exhibit of antique bed quilts, many of which were purchased on farms in the mountains and are over a century old.

Printed Accessories Retain First Place in Parisiennes' Favor

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Parisiennes of all walks are mad about printed accessories to wear with their plain frocks and ensembles this summer. It doesn't seem to matter that in the low priced emporiums printed accessories can be had at bargain prices. The smart woman keeps right on wearing them just the same, and they do look so fresh and dainty she is right in refusing to give them up.

The most fashionable women have taken to wearing little scarfs, and to carrying matching purses made of striped necktie silk with their tailored clothes. These accessories are like the ones which are shown at the top of the sketch. Made of a vivid blue with white, and worked in a chevron pattern, this scarf with its matching envelope purse is Paris preferred.

In the center is the popular dotted and striped chiffon handkerchief which is worn in Paris with the dressmaker suit and with the separate dress. It is usually worn as shown, knotted rather close around the neck.

At the bottom is a plaid taffeta scarf, which is worn in a different way. It is so draped that it looks like revers, and the ends of two corners of the square scarf are tucked under the belt. This way of wearing a scarf is a fancy of the Parisienne, who drapes it thusly with both her suits and her frocks.

Shampoos Are Helpful to This Scalp Disorder

Meticulous Cleanliness Proves a Cure.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

"My scalp is greasy and at times there is a thickish, gummy feeling to both hair and scalp. It does not cause any irritation to speak of, but it does not feel clean to me. What can I do?

"ULA."

Perhaps what you are suffering is a condition known as waxy dandruff, a combination of heavy scales and heavy oil. It is a type of disorder frequently experienced. The basic remedy lies in frequent shampooing, twice, three times a week, if need be. But keep the scalp clean and fresh all of the time.

It is one kind of scalp disorder that calls for meticulous cleanliness. There is no harm whatsoever in washing the hair twice and three times a week, providing you dry it thoroughly after each shampoo. Additional treatment for this scalp disorder is found in the application of warm oil and steaming of the scalp twice a week, this before the shampoo.

It is advisable to learn from a physician if anything is constitutionally wrong should the condition not respond to the recommended treatment.

"I suffer a form of scalp disorder that has me baffled. My hair loosens and falls out and there is a crust forming on the scalp. It is irritating at times. I use a waving fluid a great deal. Would that be the cause?

"WORRIED."

The waving lotions contain ingredients that are harmless. They should cause no irritation to the skin. That is, if you use a product put out by a reputable manufacturer. But if you think it is a contributing cause, suppose you avoid its use until you have the scalp back in good condition again. Hot medicated oil treatments are recommended for your scalp condition, and be careful not to use any but sterilized combs and brushes. Use only your own toilet articles.

The oil treatments may be taken twice a week, followed with a shampoo. Anyway, shampoo the hair at least once a week, or better twice, until you get your scalp in healthier condition.

Walther League to Give Scholarship Award for Oratory

Los Angeles, Cal., July 27.—[Special.]—Announcement of a scholarship award for the winner of the Walther league oratorical contest was made at the 40th annual convention of the International Walther [Lutheran] league today. The Rev. Erwin Umbach of Chicago said the scholarship has been authorized by Valparaiso, Ind., university.

"Education is the heart of the league program," said Mr. Umbach. "There is no need to worry about the future of the Lutheran church so long as we can get the young people to take part in church educational activities. Our church now has more than 70,000 young persons enrolled in Bible classes."

The delegates adopted resolutions to incorporate. It was shown that the league has grown to such proportions, having 50,000 members in the United States alone, and has charge of so many hospices and benevolent institutions, that it is warranted in incorporating as the International Walther league.

The league also adopted a resolution to assist the general body of the Missouri synod in removing its indebtedness of nearly $1,000,000. The effort to be made looks forward to the emergency collection to be taken among Lutherans next October. The delegates also voted to raise the league's budget for the coming year to $30,000. The convention closes tomorrow.

Childhood Can Set the Scene for Adult Life

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

The ideal attitude, I suppose, toward our fellow man is for us to blame nobody—just try to understand, since the combination of heredity plus environment is pretty strong. Or, as a noted psychologist and humanitarian puts it, we should not dislike people but dislike only their objectionable qualities. But being human, most of us go on our way, censuring and disliking certain men and women and holding them responsible for their actions.

Across my experience passed five men in one family, four of whom earned the blame of everybody who knew them. They would certainly be called, as far as society or their families were concerned, failures. They either gambled and drank to excess, became idlers or wasters, fell into a way of living inferior to the background of their upbringing, or ignored their family obligations and those to society. And always even as a child I wondered why this should have been so—why, of fine stock, they should have earned the scorn and even contempt of those who knew them.

Then one day, after they had all died in their middle years, I heard enough facts about their childhood to account in a measure for their failure. Their father had died when they were quite young, leaving their mother comfortably provided for, if she had been willing to forego the luxuries she had had. But she resented the cares and responsibilities of raising five children and although she loved her boys she had a brusque, forbidding way with them.

When the boys were still not grown, one at 16 still in boarding school, the two others 17 and 18, she would go to the country with the youngest to stay in hotels, drive about and dress a great deal for months at a time, leaving these youths to shift for themselves in a big city. Being very charming in manners and distinguished in appearance, the boys gradually became absorbed into what was called in those days a "fast" talented set, with much more money than was good for any of them. For their particular personalities it was too much.

Some years later the mother settled down, to find her sons lacking in the character and habits she thought they should have. They ran through her remaining money and she died, still loving them, but feeling they had broken her heart.

Childhood histories don't account for all the unhappiness or character lacks of adult life, but a large number of them do seem to have set the scene.

HAY FEVER VICTIMS—

KLEENEX
disposable tissues

This summer almost all hay fever sufferers will be using Kleenex. Some because of doctors' orders. Others because they, themselves, discovered the wonderful comfort of these absorbent tissues.

Kleenex is made of softest rayon-cellulose, therefore is gentler and many times more absorbent than any handkerchief.

Use and destroy

But here is the greatest joy of all! You just use Kleenex, then destroy it. The cost is very, very little—much less than having handkerchiefs laundered.

In addition to handkerchief-size Kleenex, there is another, larger size—with sheets 3 times larger! This is ideal for guest towels and general household use.

'KERFS . . . are smart handkerchiefs of rayon-cellulose—like Kleenex, but bordered, and 4 thicknesses instead of 2.

SET UP COURT TO BATTLE AUTO THEFT GANGS

Another Will Handle All Gun Toting Cases.

Two special courts were created yesterday by Chief Justice Sonsteby of the Municipal court to deal with two phases of crime which he declared have created a situation which is "menacing." The two courts, both to be located in the detective bureau at 11th and State streets, will hear only cases relating to the theft of automobiles and accessories and the carrying of concealed weapons.

JUDGE SONSTEBY.

"I have been making an investigation of these two phases of crime for some weeks," declared Chief Justice Sonsteby. "The theft of automobiles and their use in the commission of crime and the carrying of concealed weapons by criminals has created a situation which must be met unless law enforcing agencies are willing to admit their helplessness.

New Racket Develops.

"While the division of stolen automobiles under command of Capt. Matthew Zimmer has performed most efficiently, recovering approximately 90 per cent of the cars stolen, there has developed a new and profitable criminal racket. This new enterprise consists in the stripping of cars of tires, wheels, lamps, and speedometers.

"Because of this activity, there has come into existence a number of 'fences' for the distribution of such stolen parts. There appears to be a ring engaged in this work. Aside from the criminal phase, there is an economic danger to be confronted because its continuance will mean an increase in insurance rates.

"We have had the concealed firearms difficulty with us for a long time. Notorious criminals apprehended with weapons on their persons have escaped punishment through legal technicalities. Opinions of judges as to evidence have differed.

Survey Is Completed.

"At my request, the Chicago crime commission has made a survey of both situations, has developed leads and has furnished data of a most interesting nature, but which I cannot disclose at this time.

"I have directed the concentration of these types of cases in two branches of the Municipal court in order that I may have close personal contact. With the coöperation of the police and the crime commission I am hopeful that there will be a change for the better.

"I do not expect miracles nor do I delude myself into the belief that these orders will accomplish immediate results. However, I do know that laws will not enforce themselves and that there must be stern measures adopted if there is to be a betterment of conditions."

JAPAN ANGERED AS CHINESE FAIL TO FREE OFFICER

TOKIO, July 27.—(AP)—The Sino-Japanese tension in Jehol province, Manchuria, which recently appeared to be lessening, grew tense again today when Chinese military authorities failed to fulfill their pledge to secure the liberation of Col. Gonshiro Ishimoto, Japanese army representative who was kidnaped July 19.

A dispatch to the Rengo News agency from Chinchow said Japanese military officials announced they had identified the captors of M. Ishimoto and they were volunteer allies of Marshal Chang Hsiao-liang. For this reason serious trouble was expected unless the captive was freed soon.

Manchoukuo Issues Stamps.

HARBIN, Manchuria, July 27.—(AP)—New Manchoukuo postage stamps appeared here today following the suspension of Chinese postal service throughout Manchuria. Some of them bore the portrait of Henry Pu-yi, China's former boy emperor and now chief of the Manchoukuo government. It was announced that since the Manchoukuo régime is not recognized abroad Japan hereafter will handle all foreign and China bound mail for the Pu-yi régime.

Mrs. Elizabeth Channon Bendix, 209 Lake Shore drive, who got a divorce on Tuesday from Vincent Bendix, millionaire manufacturer, accepted service yesterday in the $40,000 suit brought against her shortly after the divorce hearing by W. Rundall, representing Dannenberg, said that Orville Taylor, attorney for Mrs. Bendix, told him that an effort will be made to settle the claim out of court. Dannenberg seeks payment for services in investigating Bendix's activities over a two year period on behalf of Mrs. Bendix, his attorney said.

He saw the boys allegedly trying to remove a spare tire from an automobile at Winthrop and Balmoral avenues. In their car he found several motormeters, auto horns, and other small accessories. The girl is Rose Newman, 20 years old, of 1125 South Troy street. Her companions were George Collins, 19, 4547 Polk street; Rocco Paris, 19, 1012 South 22d avenue, Bellwood; Joseph Suriano, 18, 4738 Arthington street, and S. Sato, 19, 1145 South Kolmar avenue.

WILL ROGERS EASY VICTOR IN OKLAHOMA; EX-GOV. WALTON WINS

Oklahoma City, July 27.—(AP)—Will Rogers, political stripling, and Ex-Gov. J. C. [Jack] Walton tonight wore the favors of Oklahoma Democrats.

Rogers, 32 year old schoolmaster, had a majority of 125,000 over Mrs. Mabel Bassett, state's charities commissioner, for the Democratic nomination for congressman at large.

Rallying the strength that made him governor a decade ago—a post he left by the impeachment route—Walton pulled 9,000 votes ahead of A. S. J. Shaw, former state state treasurer, and became the apparent Democratic choice for a post on the state corporation commission which controls Oklahoma's vast oil production.

Senator Elmer Thomas, Democrat, won renomination easily over Gomer Smith, Oklahoma City. Wirt Franklin, independent oil man, held a comfortable margin over James A. Harris for the Republican nomination.

Gov. W. H. Murray's personal stump tour in the interests of a friendly legislature bore fruit. The nominees are regarded as giving him control of both houses.

Official figures were awaited in the Fifth congresisonal district where Representative F. B. Swank, Democrat, was trailing O. B. Mothersead, former state bank commissioner, by 87 votes.

MAYOR WALKER ESCAPES THREAT OF U. S. TAX SUIT

New York, July 27.—[Special.]—There will be no federal income tax action in Manhattan against Mayor "Jimmy" Walker, former Sheriff Thomas M. ["Tin Box"] Farley or any other official involved in the Seabury investigation, it was learned today.

Of all the large bank accounts scrutinized by the Hofstadter legislative committee, nothing has been established to warrant placing the issue before a federal grand jury.

Federal prosecution has been expected widely since Judge Samuel Seabury first began to show the heavy bank deposits by city and county officials on comparatively small salaries. Politically, the chance for Republicans to sift further the deeds of a Democratic administration was regarded as making a federal inquiry almost certain.

Federal prosecution under the income tax law, however, is a practical impossibility because of the difficulties of proving where the money came from and the years in which it was acquired, it was explained.

Miss Fannie Turnbull, 19 years old, former Vassar college student, who disappeared on Monday, returned to her home in King Muir road, Lake Forest, yesterday. Henry K. Turnbull, who had asked police aid in the search for his daughter, said that she had been visiting friends in Rockford. "Mrs. Turnbull and I just got excited," he said. "She never intended to run away." At the time of Miss Turnbull's disappearance, her father told police that she left a note saying that she "could not stand it any longer" and urging her parents not to search for her.

INDUSTRIES SIGN UP FOR $4,000,000 WORTH OF SPACE AT FAIR

Contracts for $4,000,000 worth of space and special buildings have been signed by industrial exhibitors in the Century of Progress exposition, Rufus C. Dawes, president of the exposition, told business men who were guests at the administration building yesterday. The visitors were members of the Greater Central District association, Wabash Avenue District association, and the South Central association.

In addition to the $4,000,000 for private exhibits it was stated that the federal government had reserved $1,000,000 worth of space and the various states $2,000,000 worth. Also there are about $3,000,000 in amusement and entertainment contracts, Mr. Dawes said.

Among other speakers were Edward H. Bennett, who described the architectural plan coördinating the fair buildings, and Homer J. Buckley, head of the committee on publicity.

SENATOR WATSON OPPOSES DEBT CANCELLATIONS

Washington, D. C., July 27.—[Special.]—Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.], leader of the senate, came out today against the United States calling or participating in a conference to permit Europe to repudiate its eleven billion dollar debt to the United States.

"In my judgment it is their move on the checkerboard," he told newspaper men. "That move should be one of actual disarmament. It is unthinkable that we should permit them to keep the money they owe us so they can build bigger armies and navies. As far as I can see that is their plan."

Senator Watson is the latest addition to the large number of congressmen to come out against the proposal of Senator William E. Borah [Rad. Rep., Idaho], chairman of the foreign relations committee, that the United States initiate a joint disarmament-debt repudiation conference.

Andrew W. Mellon, ambassador to England, conferred with Secretary Stimson at the state department today. Again the utmost secrecy surrounded the talk, but it is generally understood Ambassador Mellon came from London for the purpose of talking debt repudiation with the administration. He expects to return to London in three weeks.

RUSSIA REMOVES BAN ON SALE OF PEASANTS' GOODS

MOSCOW, July 27.—(AP)—Soviet authorities today announced a new step in the direction of removing official restrictions against sales by Russian peasants of their own products.

Hereafter, according to the new decree, all peasants living within thirty miles of Moscow are freed from contracts which heretofore obligated them to deliver their products to state coöperative organizations at fixed prices. An exemption was made regarding grain, however, and the grain contracts will remain in operation.

OLD GRAY MARE IS JUST WHAT SHE USED TO BE

Tred Avon Wins Rich Arlington Race.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Tred Avon, Maryland's famous old gray mare, came bounding down the Arlington home stretch in long, even strides at about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A few seconds after she started the terrific drive which brought her from behind she was galloping past the winning post in the renewal of the Arlington Matron handicap, which was worth $10,975.

It was the black and red jacket of S. W. Labrot of Baltimore which Tred Avon carried to victory. She beat Con Amore, another Maryland mare, by a length and a half. French Duchess, owned by Mrs. John Hertz, was third, and a length behind her came the brilliant filly, Evening, in fourth place.

Mrs. Hertz's First Defeat.

This was the first time since the Matron handicap was established that Mrs. Hertz's silks have been lowered in defeat. Valenciennes won it for her two years ago and last year her Risque got the decision.

Risque was one of Mrs. Hertz's representatives in yesterday's renewal and the Hertz pair of Risque and French Duchess was backed almost as stoutly as Tred Avon. The latter has been racing consistently all season and it was a spectacular battle she waged against the champion Equipoise at Arlington only a short time ago that made her rule as the favorite in the Matron.

She's a Game Gal.

Tred Avon had to be a game old gray mare to win, for at the beginning Betty Derr was fairly flying as she took the lead. I Say and Con Amore were right with her. Tred Avon had started from the rail position and she was crowded back as they neared the turn after the long run down the back stretch.

Jockey Jimmy Burke then tried to send Tred Avon around on the outside, but I Say and Con Amore were fighting desperately for the lead at this stage and French Duchess was moving up toward them.

For a second Tred Avon was again in tight quarters and it appeared as if she was to be pinched back again. She had too much courage for that, however, and kept coming even though there was but a narrow opening for her to race through.

It's All Over.

An eighth of a mile from the line of finish her gray head was showing in front. It was all over. She has always been a notorious stretch runner. It was her great stretch run that nearly overhauled Equipoise.

So she pulled into a safe lead a half furlong out and was well in hand when Burke shot her across the finish line. Betty Derr dropped far back, but Con Amore proved her gameness by fighting back in the face of defeat and she was three lengths in front of French Duchess when the finish came.

Evening, which mustered much support, was away last and raced well back for the first half mile. She moved toward the leaders nearing the turn and just for an instant it appeared as if she was going to get to the leaders. She was racing wide and gave it up as a bad job soon after the run down the stretch started—about the time Tred Avon began to move into the lead.

Pays $6.16 to Win.

Tred Avon ran the mile in 1:37 2-5. It wasn't particularly fast as compared to some miles that have been run at Arlington this season, but the track was a trifle dull and Tred Avon didn't have to run it any faster.

In the betting she paid $6.16 to win, $4.06 to place, and $3.00 to show. Con Amore was at $16.10 to place and $7.24 to show. French Duchess paid $2.74 to show.

Except for the fleet Top Flight, the field which Tred Avon conquered included all the best fillies and mares in the country. So it is Tred Avon or Top Flight for the championship of their sex. If they should ever meet most of those in the crowd at Arlington yesterday will have a ticket on the old gray mare from Maryland. She's only 4, but that's creeping up near old age for a race horse.

Phagan's Right Travels 12 Inches; Campe Sails 12 Feet

The blow with which Johnny Phagan, the south side Negro, finished Erich Campe, the German welterweight, in less than one round of the International bout at Soldiers' field was a right that traveled only about a dozen inches, but it sent Erich traveling just about that many feet before he reposed his full length on the judges' table outside the ring. Erich saw more of America in those few seconds than he ever hopes to see again.

Charles McDonald, Jimmy Sheldon, Col. H. H. Hackett, Sheldon Clark, and Vincent Bendix were among those close enough to the ring to get rosin dust on their coat lapels.

The depression hasn't killed anything. When the band played the "Star Spangled Banner" before the start of the international bouts the crowd picked up the words and almost drowned out the notes dispensed by the paid tooters.

The German boxers were refreshed between rounds by sips from a Rhein wine shaped bottle, supposedly extinct in the land of the free. Presumably the container held water. Anyway, the sight of it made the ringsiders thirsty.

Members of both boxing teams will receive a phonographic reproduction of the show. They will be presented to each boxer by the Radio Arts productions, which recorded the radio broadcast from W-G-N for the benefit of the boys.

Herr Leonhard Mandlar, the German coach, stepped into the ring wearing the latest cut of Berlin pants. They are a vast improvement over the American type in that they have a capacity for four pints instead of two.

A blimp, gliding along like a huge fish, drifted around the fringe of the stadium and for a time took the crowd's attention from a couple of preliminary boys who were performing when it first arrived.

GERMANS ARE NO DIFFERENT FROM YANKEES IN RING

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

German boxers in their draw with Chicagoland at Soldiers' field last night showed no boxing characteristics which stamped them German, as differentiated from American. Instead, they have been taught and assimilated the tactics most approved for amateur three round bouts. Those tactics are the rushing, tearing in, slugging offense which pleases spectators, coupled with aggressiveness which in close bouts weighs heavily with officials.

To say that German boxers have learned and assimilated American methods is no disparagement to them. Rather it is a compliment that they have so quickly adopted a sport which was verboten before the world war. That their science is based on the most approved method is tribute to their efficiency.

So far as winning in international competition is concerned, the Germans are farther advanced than was the French international team of a year ago, which found science and boxing, in which the French were well prepared, not effective against heavier hitting, for which some science had been sacrificed by the Americans.

Germans Do Well.

So the four bouts won by German fighters were bouts in which German hitting and aggressiveness prevailed over American hitting and aggressiveness. The four Chicagoland victories were won by the same type of attack.

That Germany could send a team of eight champions 4,000 miles and gain a draw is a notable feat. That they expected in advance to win does not detract from the feat. It was a creditable performance, which suggests future meetings between Teutons and Yankees. The probability of such meetings is enhanced by the sportsmanship shown and the good feeling engendered.

With the general type of offense much the same, so far as the winners on each squad were concerned, there were two points in which there was a contrast. Chicagoland boys were superior in footwork. They sidestepped more cleverly and their weaving was more like that Dempsey made popular than the methodical boring in of the Germans, which resembled the Schmeling type. In head-slipping, too, perhaps Chicagoland boxers were superior. This characterization is general rather than specific.

Germans Ringwise.

If the Americans used their feet better, the Germans were more effective, especially in the lighter classes, in hitting from any position. They risked taking a blow for the sake of landing one. That appeared to be the policy of the squad. That they were experienced and ringwise as well was shown by the way they fought in the clinches and their alertness immediately after breaking. It was a little carelessness in this respect which sent George Goodman to his haunches in the first round of his bout with Hans Ziglarski.

In recapitulation, the Germans were in splendid condition, never flinched even in those bouts which they lost and showed splendid courage. To this was added a ring viciousness which subsided into a smile immediately at the final bell.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Owing to circumstances beyond their control, the White Sox were unable to achieve a victory yesterday over the tail end Boston Sox. The supposedly feeble easterners refused to do anything except hit the ball into the wide open spaces. That's just what the Chicago brand of hosiery wasn't able to do so, so it was nosed out by a cool 15 to 5 in the second of the series.

As usual, Mr. Smead Jolley, who is no bargain as a fielder but a deadly enemy when he has a bat in hand, contributed freely to the afternoon's gayety. He drew a dividend on each of five appearances at the plate. In his first effort he walked and scored as part of a four run upheaval that sent Pete Daglia off to a sad start. When he came up the next time in the third he singled and registered for the first bit of a five run jolt, during which Daglia vanished. Later Jolley doubled to drive a mate home. Then he exploded a homer with two on and afterward tapered off with a double that enabled him to score for the fourth time.

Sox Rookies Go to School.

In view of the large lead the Boston boys picked out for themselves in the first three innings Lew Fonseca, the Chicago boss, established a sort of a baseball school. He employed two rookie hurlers, Paul Gregory and Archie Wise, neither of whom could match the kind of stuff Bob Kline, the 21 year old 225 pounder, was throwing at the locals. And because Billy Sullivan has been a total loss at all other positions he was requested to step in and show what he could do as a catcher. In a four inning exhibition he didn't have much luck discouraging the Red Sox whenever they chose to run the bases. They stole three of them on him in one inning, and the only two throws he made went wild.

The day's cannonading began with the first batter. Olson looped a single over first. He was mopped up in a double play, but that proved merely an incident. Daglia suddenly swooned under a stroke of generosity and filled the bags on passes to Johnson, Jolley, and Alexander. Pickering rolled a slow one toward third, but nobody picked it up, so Johnson scored and the corners remained populated. Warstler singled to center, sending Jolley and Alexander home. Tate bounced to English, who deliberated about where to make a play and finally pegged wild to second. Pickering scored on the error, after which Kline grounded to Daglia.

The White Sox bounced up with a run in their initial attack, but it was of a bargain variety. After two were out Blue lined a single to left. Fothergill doubled along the first base line and Blue halted at third, but resumed traveling when Warstler let Johnson's return throw roll to the stand.

Smead Starts More Trouble.

Jolley enjoyed the distinction of starting the riot that grew into five runs in the third. He singled to center and Alexander singled through short. Pickering's single loaded the bases. Warstler cleaned up two of the bases with a hit to center. Daglia was yanked off the stage and Gregory came in for his daily stretch. Tate welcomed the young fellow with a two bagger to right center, scoring Pickering and planting Warstler on third. Kline's batting effort proved harmless, but Olson smacked a single over second to move Warstler and Tate over the counter.

Gregory got himself into more trouble in the fourth and for humanitarian reasons was removed. Johnson singled and scored on Jolley's double. The next two men were set down, but when Warstler walked Wise was called in to finish the inning. This was followed by a slight outburst on the part of the domestic Sox in their half. Appling singled, English singled, and Grube walked to fill the bases. These three fellows crossed the plate on Olson's boot of Funk's roller and a single by Hayes.

CALNAN TO TAKE OLYMPIC OATH FOR ALL TEAMS

Los Angeles, Cal., July 27.—(AP)—The honor of taking the Olympic oath for the entire assemblage of world athletic stars during the opening ceremonies Saturday will go to Lieut. George C. Calnan, U. S. N., for years a national fencing champion and a four time Olympic competitor.

The American Olympic committee also selected F. Morgan Taylor of Quincy, Ill., 400 meter hurdles competitor, for the third straight time to carry the national emblem in the parade of nations. Taylor originally was slated to take the Olympic oath, but yielded to Lieut. Calnan on the ground of seniority.

DROP FULL GAME TO PIRATES IN PENNANT RACE

Root Is Victim in First Game.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., July 27.—In the first game of the Cubs' double header with the Boston Braves this afternoon, the Braves made six singles and won, 2 to 1. In the second game they made 10 singles, a double and a triple and lost, 4 to 1. All of which proves nothing, except that baseball is an upside down game and that Charley Root, who lost the first game, was unlucky while Guy Bush, who won the second game, this day was a pal of Santa Claus.

The first game, to all statistical purposes, was over in the third inning, in which the Braves made the winning run when a bad throw by Bill Jurges broke down the tail end of a double play that would have averted the trouble. However, each of the Braves runs got its inception on pitching mistakes.

Shires, who scored the first and tying run, with two out in the second inning, reached first when he was hit by a pitched ball. The winning run was an offspring of a base on balls to Maranville. The Cubs' run was scored in the first inning and was unearned, so on the earned run basis, the Braves rated a 1 to 0 win, although they were outhit seven for eight bases to six hits for six bases.

Cubs Miss Opportunity.

The Cubs had a big chance to do things in the ninth, for Stephenson opened with a double and was on third with one out. But when the game ended Stevie was still out there on third.

The second game also was decided before the half way point. The Cubs made two unearned runs in the third inning, but in the fourth they made enough to win on a double by Stevie, a single by Grimm, a walk to Hartnett and a double by Jurges.

The joy of winning was suddenly obliterated in the second game when the score board flashed a Pirate rally in New York, giving the Pittsburghs two victories over the Giants. No matter what trick mathematics the Cubs used they could figure no better for themselves than lose a full game to the league leading Pirates on the day's activities. This made a difference of five full games between the leaders and the second place Chicagoans.

FIRST GAME

The Cubs got a run home in the first inning of the first game despite the devastating effects of successive strikeouts by English and Cuyler. Herman opened with a single to center. He stayed on first while English fanned, but as Cuyler missed the third strike Bill stole second and went to third when Spohrer threw the ball into center field. Stevie ran the count to three balls and two strikes, then walked, whereupon J. Moore singled to left, Herman scoring and Stevie stopping at second. Grimm lined to Leach.

The Braves tied it up in the second. With one out Shires was hit by a pitched ball. Worthington singled to center and Shires went to third, where he held on while Ford lined to J. Moore. However, Spohrer singled to center, Shires scoring and Worthington stopping at second. Brown forced Spohrer.

Walk Starts Trouble.

It was not Root's fault that he didn't get out of the game deciding jam in the third, although he was to blame for getting in said jam. Maranville walked to start the inning. Leach lined to Cuyler, but Berger singled past first, Maranville going to third. R. Moore sent a double play grounder to Herman and Berger was forced at second with a throw to Jurges. Jurges made a low throw to first and the double play wasn't realized. Meanwhile Maranville was home with the winning run. Shires flied to Moore.

Then the big threat of a tie in the ninth. Stevie led off with a double off the left field fence and moved to third while Maranville was throwing out J. Moore. Grimm then tapped to Maranville and Stevie was obliged to

PIRATES WIDEN LEAD; CAPTURE 2 FROM GIANTS

Take Opener, 9 to 8; Win Nightcap, 4 to 2.

New York, July 27.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Giants twice today to increase their lead in the National league to five full games over the Cubs, who broke even at Boston. The scores were 9 to 8 and 4 to 2. Bill Harris received credit for both victories.

The first game was a parade of pitchers, with Harris on the mound when the Pirates went out in front with a four run rally in the sixth. The nightcap was a pitchers' battle, with Waite Hoyt holding the league leaders in check until the ninth, and Bill Swift and Harris limiting the Giants to four hits.

Five home runs figured in the scoring. Vaughan and Piet drove the ball over the fence for the Pirates, while Terry, Lindstrom and Joe Moore hit circuit drives for the Giants. Scores:

Sciolino, Cox Meet Tonight in Sparta Ring

Tracey Cox, Indianapolis, Ind., lightweight, and Tony Sciolino of Buffalo, N. Y., will meet in one of three ten round bouts at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, tonight. The show is the third to be presented by the West Side Boxing club.

Jim Mullen made the matches, which include a six and a four round bout in addition to the triple windup, but in the future he will act in an advisory capacity to Al Miller, who was reappointed matchmaker for the club yesterday by Joe Triner, president, and Sidney Strotz, treasurer and secretary.

Harry Dublinsky and Barney Ross, west side boxers, meet Herman and Henry Perlick, Kalamazoo, Mich., junior welterweights, in the other ten round events.

Mullen has announced that the winner of the Canzoneri-Billy Petrolle lightweight title match at New York Aug. 8 will defend his title against the boy who makes the best showing tonight in Chicago in September. Ross, Dublinsky, Sciolino, and Cox are likely candidates.

45,000 THRILL AS GERMANS TIE CHICAGO BOXERS

Golden Glovers Rally After 3 Defeats.

legged and trying to ignore the fireworks in his brain when the second punch exploded. He did not fall. He was fired to the floor and off it, under the lower rope and onto the judges' bench outside the ring, where he lay for twelve seconds, his face growing purplish from the shock as he tried to raise his head.

At "twelve" he swayed to his haunches, but when he tried to stagger back into the ring his legs collapsed and he flopped over again, spread over the laps of two extra judges awaiting assignments. There the count of twenty was tolled over him, it being a rule in amateur fighting to allow a man twenty seconds to recover when he is knocked out of the ring.

First Three Germans Win.

Werner Spannagel, the German flyweight; Hans Ziglarski, their bantam, and Josef Schleinkofer, their featherweight, all had won their fights and the diamond belts awarded to the victors before an American broke through the German service to win a fight. Spannagel beat Johnny Baltzer, Ziglarski beat George Goodman, and Schleinkofer's victim was Leo Rodak, the captain of the Golden Gloves team.

Then Henry Rothier won from Franz Kartz of Germany in a close, tough fight in the lightweight division, and Phagan's victory was followed by Tony Sutton's decision over Hans Bernloehr, the German captain, in a middleweight fight that tied the score at 3 and 3.

Adolph Wiater, an earnest, clumsy light heavyweight, gave the American team a margin of one victory going into the final fight, and Dvonch, though he fought with the courage of a lunatic, was unable to stand off the huge 20 year old heavyweight from the other side, Kohlhaas.

FIRST GERMAN INVADERS

The international fights brought the Germans into the ring as a national team for the first time in America and, though there had been many tough American sons of German parents in amateur and professional competition in this country in years past, there was much curiosity as to how well the native German boys had learned the science of fist fighting in the years since the kaiser's abdication.

Starting from scratch in the fall of 1918, knowing no more about fist fighting than the average American knows about cricket, the Germans opened hundreds of boxing clubs throughout the new republic. Last night they were invading the fabled land of the multi-million-dollar gate to challenge one of the best teams that ever fought under the Stars and Stripes. It was their opportunity to prove that the left hook, the right cross and the other standard gestures of the sport were not bounded by the borders of any state.

Early Crowd Straggles In.

The early crowd straggled in by twos and threes and deployed over the concrete slope of the amphitheater on the western side of the structure, shaded from the glare of the sun by the colonnade surmounting the rim. Down in the pit, a wooded dish whose construction consumed 15 carloads of lumber and gave three weeks' work to about 200 men, mostly carpenters, the ushers and policemen gave an exhibition of dignified free-style loafing, waiting for the patrons to claim the $3.30 sections.

There was a detail of soldiers from the 61st coast artillery in khaki to man the big lamps of an anti-aircraft searchlight battery in the theatrical moments after moon-up when the German and American colors fluttered up the sticks amid patriotic music. They smoked cigarets, dribbled popcorn into their upturned faces and devoted themselves to minding their own business in a quiet way, awaiting their duty.

The ring was set under a framework of high steel pipes which supported the lights and a border of red, white, and blue bunting. From the corners of this structure the American and German colors projected on small staffs. The noisy morning glories of the loud speaker were similarly placed.

Surprise the Visitors.

The ushers were in the famous Chicago Blues adopted by Andy Frain, a smart young local who organized this corps some years ago and trained them to the revolutionary notion that the seat the customer pays for is precisely the seat the customer ought to get.

Now Mr. Frain's ushers are the best in the U. S. A. They wash their faces, they say Ma'm to ladies, they wear white gloves with their regimental full dress blue, they cock their caps at a sassy angle over the left eye, and they put the customers in the seats they pay for. This treatment is very strange to customers from other cities, who for generations have looked upon the ushers at ball yards and fight shows as extrahazards in the competition for their duly boughten pews. If there should come a time when there are no more customers for Mr. Frain's ushers to usher, the boys can go in for lion taming or some varsity band.

A phonograph with a whoop-in-the-cistern sort of voice maintained a continual din of step-along records such as the field artillery song and the stein song of the state of Maine, where the stein has been an illegal device for many a year. Maxham's band, dealing in actual tunes, as distinguished from the echoes flung from the musical cannery, moved into action at half past seven with the rather premature theme song of the recent Democratic convention, "Happy Days Are Here Again!" This piece is beginning to crowd "Sweet Adeline" nowadays, and the time isn't far away when to sing, bray, or otherwise commit "Happy Days Are Here Again!" will be sufficient evidence of intoxication.

Judge Walter P. Steffen, contemporary of the immortal Walter Eckersall in their football days at the University of Chicago, moved around the rail outside the press section and paused to describe his feelings on hearing himself referred to as "the old man" by one of his football players from Carnegie Tech last fall.

"I am only 46," his honor said "but then it came to me that I am older than A. A. Stagg was when I was playing for him and called him 'the old man.'"

Two planes came out of the distance and lazed around the sky, apparently engaged in no particular business.

By 7:45 the wooden bowl was about half full and the familiar hub-bub of voices was penetrated by a shriek from outside the plant, the voice of the police sirens as the escort brought the German fighters up to their dressing room in a big white bus.

Just Milk-Fed Pine.

The ring lights came on for a test and a hot dog in a customer's hand 30 yards away emitted a dying sizzle and burned to a crisp. There were 36 of these bulbs, blue ones as big as grape fruit, enclosed in megaphone reflectors, green on the outside but silvered inside.

Two of Mr. Frain's gentlemanly ushers turned scarlet and clapped their white gloved hands in a warning at one of the ringside merchants who was shouldering around the ring yelling in a coarse voice, "Here y'are, get a cushion; the seats are all hard and dusty."

Hard the seats might have been although not as hard as some, being of milk-fed soft pine, but dusty they positively were not, having been swabbed down by about two inches of rain only 24 hours before. This misleading advertising is the sort of thing that gives the cushion business a bad name.

Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois prizfight commission, crawled into a seat in the official row and, with a long official list in his hands, waved and yelled to this one and that one around the place, assigning the judges, referees, doctors, and so forth to their places along the margin of the ring.

In facetious mood the boys of Maxham's band spelled a medley of old fashioned pretzel songs, including "Hi Lee, Hi Lo," and "Drink a Little Dropkin," and the customers tramped on the wooden floor in response in the effect of the vaudeville wooden shoe dance.

Mandlar Tests Ring.

The band annihilated "Let's Have Another Cup of Coffee," and then reached into the archives for "Some of These Days," which the customers hummed slightly. Leonhard Mandlar, the coach of the German team, came down to the ring and reached in a fistful of fingers to test the resiliency of the felt wadding. Whether he was anxious on behalf of his own fighters or the Americans or merely curious did not appear.

Douglas Warnes, the announcer, was first in the ring, a long, grave young man, to ask all present to extinguish their cigarets, cigars and matches before throwing them on the wooden deck. This was a popular idea and he drew as much applause as a second string favorite son being nominated for Vice President.

Arch Ward, THE TRIBUNE sports editor and stage manager of the opera, was flattering away with both dressing rooms on his short line phone from the ringside, reporting progress. Now a German had snapped a shoelace, now an American couldn't find his pants. Now some one wanted to get his little boy into the parade and now would it be all right to have the teams walk up the south aisle and shake hands with a party who was very anxious to meet them personally.

"All right," Mr. Ward remarked into the little phone. "All right, Germans. Come on, Germans. Move in now. Down the aisles, Germans. All right, band. Come on, band, with the German Turner March."

Germans Miss Cues.

The Germans missed their cues entering the ring, lined up in team formation along the south side exactly contrary to instructions and rehearsals and were reformed by hand into Indian file on the west side, but facing east instead of north according to the plan. The Americans were most military and solemn. They wore their light blue Golden Gloves bathrobes with the white satin cuffs and the red letters picked out in white across their backs. They faced north in a single file on the east side of the ring.

The German kids grinned across, amused by their solemnity. They then seemed to realize that they were out of step and wheeled, facing north.

The band played "Deutschland Uber Alles." The crowd rose and many of those present seemed familiar with the words and air. Anyway, they sang something to the German air. As the music went on, the coast artillery men whipped the shutter off their big lamp and blazed it at the flag masts at the northern end of the field. The German colors, three wide horizontal bars, black, red, and gold, reading down, went up the spar and the crowd yelled enthusiastically.

Now came the "Star Spangled Banner" from the band and the Stars and Stripes climbed briskly, also picked out by the army's artificial moon. The two colors hung there on a horizontal rope. A detail of German war veterans had marched to the ring with the team and two of them raised their colors. Six members of the Medill post of the American Legion escorted the Americans and two of their number raised the flag.

German Official Praises Tribune for Staging Show

The sportsmanship of the Chicagoland boxers in the Germany-United States Golden Gloves match last night at Soldiers' field and the manner in which the German fighters and officials were treated during the stay in Chicago was praised by Werner Schuller, German vice consul in Chicago, in a statement made immediately after the bouts.

Mr. Schuller praised THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for its work and for bringing the German champions to Chicago at its expense.

"We deeply appreciate everything THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has done," he said. "There were no questionable decisions and the Germans of Chicago will never forget the spectacle which was staged tonight at Soldiers' field."

Blow by Blow Description of Eight International Bouts Tells Story of Struggle for Golden Glove Championship

112 POUND DIVISION

Werner Spannagel, Germany, beat Johnny Baltzer, United States, in three rounds.

FIRST ROUND—Spannagel came out fast, jabbing with a left. Baltzer missed a right and they exchanged rights to the head. In close Spannagel beat a tattoo on Baltzer's stomach. Spannagel backed away with a slight cut on his forehead They traded lefts at long range, then the German missed a wild right. Both missed left leads and went in close. Spannagel landed a right to the jaw and they clinched. They battled away furiously in in a neutral corner. Baltzer ducked a left and landed a right to the ribs. Spannagel had Baltzer in distress from a right to the chin at the bell.

SECOND ROUND—Spannagel was short with a left and met a right to the chin. They traded rights to the face. Spannagel went in close again and scored with a right hand smash to the stomach. Baltzer met the German's rush with a straight left, but Spannagel countered with a left hook to the jaw. Spannagel hammered both hands to the body. Baltzer sent a left to the stomach. Spannagel was wild with a right uppercut and received a left to the mouth in exchange. Spannagel belted Baltzer with a hard right to the jaw as the round ended.

FIRST ROUND—Goodman's left jab was short. Ziglarski landed a wild left and right to the chin and they went into a furious exchange. Hans missed a left and slipped to the canvas. He missed badly with a roundhouse right and Goodman beat a tattoo on his stomach. Along the ropes they traded body blows. Ziglarski landed a left to the chin and Goodman went down for a nine count. The German rushed in, trying for a knockout, but Goodman stood him off with straight lefts. Another left hook sent Goodman down again for a count of nine. The bell saved him further punishment.

THIRD ROUND—They came out like wildcats and had the crowd in a frenzy as they slugged away. The German shifted to a southpaw stance. He lunged in with a right, but Goodman sidestepped it and came in to land a short right to the chin. The German missed a long left and Goodman again dropped a right to the face, bringing the claret from Ziglarski's mouth. They put their foreheads together and exchanged body blows. The German nearly wrestled Goodman through the ropes. Goodman was the aggressor, landing effectively to the body. The German accidentally butted Goodman over the left eye at the bell.

Joseph Schleinkofer, Germany, beat Leo Rodak, United States, in three rounds.

SECOND ROUND—Josef used his long right to advantage, scoring to the face. He caught Leo in a corner and landed two lefts to the head. Rodak made him back away with a left to the chin. Rodak ducked a wide left. Josef belted Leo with two lefts to the stomach, but Rodak retaliated with both hands to the head. Schleinkofer's sharp left to the body sent Rodak into the ropes. Another left brought blood from Rodak's nose. Schleinkofer punished Leo in a neutral corner with both hands to the head.

THIRD ROUND—The German leaped clear across the ring, but Leo sidestepped his rush. They went in close and exchanged rights to the head. Leo met the German's rush with a right, but the German kept coming, scoring with both hands to the head. Schleinkofer drove a hard right to the nose. Leo smashed both hands to the stomach. Leo drove a hard right uppercut to the chin. They swapped rights. Leo pulled Schleinkofer into position and cracked him with a right to the face. Schleinkofer sent over a long left to the face, but was warned for hitting on a break after a clinch.

FIRST ROUND—Rothier lunged out quickly with two sharp left hooks to the jaw. Kartz missed with a right. So did Rothier, slipping to the canvas. Rothier brought the crowd to its feet by scoring with repeated left hooks to the chin. The German lunged in with a straight right, but Rothier caught him with two left hooks. Rothier staggered Kartz with a right. Kartz landed a stiff right and Henry clinched. Rothier scored with a left hook to Kartz' chin. Kartz' right was high.

FIRST ROUND—Sutton sent a light left to the face, but took a left and a right in return. Bernloehr jabbed twice then made Tony miss. They traded body punches. The German was short with both hands, then landed an overhand right to the chin. He sent a right to the ribs, but Sutton bombarded him with both hands to the body. They traded rights. Hans boxed Sutton into a corner and pounded away with rights, but most of them were blocked.

SECOND ROUND—Hans jabbed a left to the face and crossed a right to the chin. Sutton used his right effectively to the body in close. They stood off and boxed. Sutton caught the German coming in with a hard right to the chin that shook up Bernloehr. Bernloehr was wild with both hands. He missed again and took a hard right to the chin. In close Sutton belted Hans around the belt with both hands. He shifted to the head and forced Hans to give ground.

THIRD ROUND—Sutton ducked Hans' left and pounded the German around the stomach. He forced Bernloehr into a corner and blazed away, doubling up Hans. They traded rights. Bernloehr appeared tired. They swapped lefts. Sutton's right to the head staggered the German. Bernloehr sent an uppercut to the chin. He landed another right. Sutton scored with both hands to the head. The German met Tony's rush with a straight left and followed it up with a right to the ear. They traded lefts at the bell.

Adolph Wiater, United States, beat Hans Berger, Germany, in three rounds.

FIRST ROUND—Wiater came out fast, leveling rights to the stomach. Berger landed a looping left to the head. In close they traded punches to the body. Both flailed wildly to the body. They hammered away at each other in close until pulled apart.

SECOND ROUND—Wiater danced in with short, hard rights to the head, then lowered his attack to the stomach. The German's hard right was too high. The boys were making a hard fight of it. Berger lifted a right to the head. He was over anxious and met a hard right to the face. Berger scored twice with rights to the head, then crashed a right to Adolph's mouth. Wiater clubbed the German with a sharp right. Both missed rights and they clinched.

THIRD ROUND—Adolph came out fast and landed two rights to the head. They exchanged sharp blows to the head. Wiater spun the German around with a right to the head. In close, each scored to the body. Adolph belted the German with a right, a left, and a right to the head. The German appeared so tired he almost fell from his own efforts. However, he continued to fight furiously, sending both hands to the body. They stood toe to toe and slugged it out, bringing the crowd to their feet at the bell.

HEAVYWEIGHT DIVISION

Heinrich Kohlhaas, Germany, stopped Duffy Dvonch, United States, in two rounds.

FIRST ROUND—Dvonch led with a light left and missed with a right to the head. He missed again as the German sidestepped. Kohlhaas dropped Dvonch for a two count with a right to the head. Another right sent Dvonch down for a one count. The German rushed in with repeated blows and had Dvonch in great distress. Kohlhaas slipped to his knee in his endeavor to score a knockout. He connected with a terrific right to the face and Duffy's knees buckled. Dvonch fought back gamely, but took terrific punishment to the head. Duffy caught the German coming in with a right to the stomach. The bell found them in midring slugging.

SECOND ROUND—Kohlhaas met Duffy with an overhand right to the head. Duffy's right slipped over the German's shoulder. A right to the chin sent Duffy down for a count of nine. As he arose, Referee Dave Barry intervened and raised the German's hand in sign of victory.

Teammates Nearly Mob Kohlhaas as He Wins His Bout

"Huzzah for Heinrich!"

From the dressing room where Germany's champion boxers were making ready to quit the scene of the International Golden Gloves fights came the shout shortly before midnight.

It was loud enough to be heard above the dine of the great crowd which was filing out. It was so enthusiastic that for a second it seemed that Heinrich Kohlhaas, who had just knocked out Duffy Dvonch to assure the Germans an even break, might be mobbed by his own teammates. The members of the German team, some of them already in their street clothes, others partly dressed, and some of them nude chasing out from under the shower baths, swarmed all over the huge German heavyweight.

Just one member of the team failed to join in it. He was Hans Bernloehr, the captain of the German team, who a few minutes earlier had lost a decision to Tony Sutton. Still in his fighting trunks, Bernloehr sat on the edge of his cot, his face in his hands.

"If I had won our team would have won," he murmured in German, and he seemed to place the whole blame of his team's failure to get better than an even break upon his own shoulders.

But the German captain wasn't complaining about the decision. Neither did any of the other German boxers who lost close decisions. Neither did Erich Campe, who was knocked out of the ring by Johnny Phagan.

"Everything was fair," they said. "Your Chicago has been wonderful to us. We are sorry we couldn't whip your boys, but we are happy we didn't get whipped."

Campe, one of the most likable kids on the German team, wasn't hurt by that knockout Phagan landed on him. The only scar of the battle he showed was a slight cut on the lip. "But, my, how that fellow can hit," he said.

The German boys will remain in Chicago today and most of them will get away tonight for California and the Olympic games.

Cancel Grand Circuit Card at Fort Erie After Storm

FORT ERIE, Ont., July 27.—The final races of the Fort Erie Grand Circuit meeting were canceled today because of rain. The races, officials said at first, would be deferred until Friday, but later they were abandoned completely.

TRAILING, 3 TO 0; THEN AMERICANS PROVE COURAGE

BY WILFRID SMITH.

When Germany led by three bouts to nothing in the international fights last night many in the vast crowd may have conceded the amateur champions from overseas the team title. But there was none in the Chicago dressing room who had such an idea.

Johnny Baltzer, outweighed nearly eight pounds, lost a close decision, although he finished strongly. Johnny came back to the team quarters under the east stands with a smile and a prediction that the team would come through. Then Georgie Goodman lost. Still the morale held up.

Had the boys lost heart after the defeat of Capt. Leo Rodak, they could not have been blamed. Rodak certainly waged as great a battle as any in his two years as a Golden Gloves champion.

Three bouts to nothing. And along came Henry Rothier, a Belgian lad, who led his mates to an even break in the international fights. You know Rothier's story; its been printed before. Less than six years ago he came to this country with his father from Belgium. His mother still lives there. During the war, when the German advance swept across Albert's kingdom in a vain attempt to reach Paris, the Rothiers fled before that advance.

The Chicago Boys Knew.

Last spring, when Rothier learned that a team from Chicagoland would fight the champions of Germany, he scarcely could wait for the day. Henry reported at Wawasee in poor physical condition because of a recent operation on his nose.

So when Rothier ducked the swings of Kartz and countered with left hooks to the head the Chicago boys knew they were on the way.

And how the boys cheered Henry when he came back with the first championship belt! And then they whooped it up for Johnny Phagan.

Sutton's victory over Germany's captain was as surprising as Rodak's defeat. Tony is one of the oldest of the Chicago boys. He's married and has two children.

"I want to quit boxing with an international victory," Tony said when he was named on the team. And he did. Tony's going back to the farm at Nichols, Ia.

Duffy Disappoints Mates.

The boys were disappointed at the finish. They had picked Duffy Dvonch to bowl over the German heavyweight, Kohlhaas, and clinch a victory by the same score that the 1931 team defeated France. But Duffy forgot to duck.

The boys were handled expertly in the corners by Johnny Behr, Jabber Young, and Izzy Kline, not to mention other volunteers. The Chicago boys showed superior condition, which was the dividend on their days at Wawasee, while the Germans were being entertained here and there in Chicago. Without this advantage the score would not have been even.

Georgie Goodman has a slightly cut eye. Leo Rodak has a slight kink in his arm, and Duffy Dvonch is slightly dizzy.

18 Hole Playoff Will Be Held Aug. 7.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

They almost had an Illinois Professional Golfers' association champion at the Glen Oak Country club yesterday, but it so happened that Harry Cooper of the home club and Frank Walsh of Bryn Mawr were included in the same threesome, and the proximity is probably what caused both of them to shoot 36 hole scores of 141 to tie for the state title. They will play off the deadlock at eighteen holes on Aug. 7 at Glen Oak.

There may have been some indecision with reference to the Illinois P. G. A. title, but the question of the eight Chicago places in the national tournament to be run off over the Kelsar course at St. Paul, Aug. 30 to Sept. 4, was settled definitely. Cooper and Walsh were admitted without counting, as was Horton Smith of Oak Park, who furnished inspiration for Cooper and Walsh by playing with them and shooting a 145.

The other five qualifiers for the big show from these parts included the consistent George Smith of Onwentsia with 146, and Abe Espinosa of Medinah with a like total as the result of an afternoon 69; the veterans, Harry Hampton of Beverly and Jock Hutchison of Glen View with 149, and Gunnar Nelson of Rockford, who smashed the Glen Oak course record Monday, and came in with 150 yesterday.

Cooper, playing over his own course after two days of illness, shot a 71 in the morning and followed with a 70 for 141, five strokes under par. Walsh was three under in the morning, but took a 71 in the afternoon, due to taking a 4 on the sixteenth while Cooper was making a birdie three. Their complete cards follow:

Evanston's four man team also captured first prize. The foursome consisted of H. A. Hattstrom, 75; Roy Nellis, 72; Clyde Winters, 86, and Art Wichman, 81. Their total score was 314. The two man team of the Chicago club won first place in that competition. The twosome consisted of Chet Williams, 75, and G. S. Bomsted, 82. William Miller shot a 92 to win the President's cup.

June Beebe Triumphs in Women's Golf

Mrs. John W. Taylor, of Evanston, who on Tuesday defeated the defending champion, Jane Weiller, of Northmoor, in the first round of the women's Chicago district golf tournament at Riverside, was eliminated in her second round match yesterday by Miss June Beebe of Olympia Fields, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Taylor's game was just the reverse of that which she played when she conquered the champion. Her tee shots were bad and she was continually short of the green. At the 11th she picked up after shooting out of bounds. The card:

Miss Beebe—In	654	465	4
Mrs. Traylor—In	7x3	455	4

Miss Rena Nelson, Exmoor champion, turned in the best card of the week in her match with Mrs. S. L. Reinhardt Jr. of Northmoor, Miss Nelson had a 42 going out and 36 coming in for a 78, two over woman's par. She won her match with Mrs. Reinhardt, 2 and 1. Mrs. Reinhardt played an erratic game. At the fifth she drove out of bounds, sliced badly at the seventh and was short at the ninth. On the inward nine she got into the woods and river at the 17th and wound up with a medal score of 43—39—82.

Young Jean Armstrong of Indian Hill eliminated Mrs. Melvin Jones, Lincolnshire, 2 and 1. Mrs. Jones started out nicely, being 2 up at the turn. But coming in she was continually in trouble.

Mrs. H. W. Tupper, Olympia Fields, defeated Miss Roberta Mackay of Glen Oak, 8 and 6. The pairings for today's semi-finals:

Miss Beebe and Mrs. Tupper.
Miss Armstrong and Miss Nelson.

LOTT AND PARKER ARE VICTORS IN CANADIAN TENNIS

OTTAWA, Ont., July 27.—(AP)—Led by the Chicago delegation, six players from the United States advanced to the quarter final round in the men's and women's singles events in the Canadian national tennis championships today.

George Lott of Chicago, Frankie Parker of Milwaukee, and Keith Werner of Los Angeles survived in the men's tournament to try conclusions with a quintet of established Canadian stars, including three members of the Davis cup team.

In the women's division Helen Fulton and Louise Hofmeister of Chicago and Mrs. Esther Bartosh of Los Angeles won today's matches to reach the last eight.

Lott downed Commander J. C. L. Edwards of Ottawa, 6-0, 6-2. But the 15 year old Parker kept right up to Lott by eliminating Bobby Murray of McGill university, 6-0, 6-1. Werner defeated J. G. McLean of Toronto, 6-1, 6-4.

The other quarter finalists in the men's singles are Walter Martin of Regina, Marcel Rainville of Montreal, and Gilbert Nunns of Toronto, all Canadian Davis cup players, and Leo Boucher and Roland Longtin of Montreal.

Wall-Eyed Pike Wind Blows, and Creels Are Full

BY BOB BECKER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Blaney, Mich., July 27.—A wall eyed pike wind was blowing yesterday, and how the fishermen up here in this part of the north's vacationland enjoyed it! Early in the morning a spanking breeze began to blow down from Lake Superior, putting white caps on the lakes. On previous trips into the upper peninsula we have found that such a cool breeze, bringing with it a partly cloudy sky, always stirred the wall eyes into action. Yesterday was no exception. We hopped into our car and took a circle tour around some of the northeast lakes to see what was doing in the fishing world. We found the wall eye hunters right on the job.

Taking the main highway around Manistique lake, a large body of water well stocked with pike, we found a number of Illinois and Ohio fishermen, trolling over the bars in search of a string of fish. The wall eyes have been striking well in this lake, which is one of a group of three lakes with sandy bottoms offering an ideal habitat to the pike. Nearly all of the fishermen were using live minnows.

Continuing our jaunt on route 98 up to M-28 we dropped in to look at East lake, where we found the old Ohio and Illinois fishing combination at work again. Two cars, one from each state, were parked on the lake shore. This lake has both wall eyes and small mouth bass and is another sandy bottomed fishing hole.

We continued east to Newberry, chatted with conservation department officials for a few minutes, and turned west to Seney, paralleling one of the largest cedar swamps we have ever seen in the north country. Looking at that broad stretch of lowland covered with a dense group of dark green cedars we knew why there are lots of deer in this neighborhood.

At this time of the year many of marshes in this section are being visited by the blueberry pickers. They were out in large numbers yesterday. Along the way we saw many hikers carrying pails or vendors at the side of the road eager to sell the luscious blueberries.

In the afternoon we left the blueberry pickers and the wall eyed pike fishermen for another hike to MacEachern pond in the Simmons woods to see if we could connect with a few big brook trout that are known to live in this body of water. The high northwest wind nearly blew us off the rickety old raft during the short time that we had on the pond, but we managed to stick long enough to learn that this body of water is home to some whopping big trout.

We picked up a pair of them that measured between 13 and 14 inches, and we saw one close to the raft that was more than 17 inches long. Leonard Schultz, one of the caretakers in the Simmons woods, on a quick trip to the pond yesterday morning picked up an old lunker more than 16 inches long. If a trout fisherman were to work that pond at sundown he ought to bring out a fine string of big fish.

In the Wake of the News

GERMANS AND AMERICANS.

GERMAN and American amateur boxers had not met one another personally before the postponement of their international bouts Tuesday night because of rain. The visitors had trained at the Germania club in Chicago while the Yankees had been in camp at Lake Wawasee, arriving here only in time to weigh in.

Originally it was planned to hold a dinner following the bouts. Because of the postponement the Germans suggested a dinner be held at 9 o'clock instead of 12 o'clock, as previously scheduled. Otherwise they would not meet their opponents socially. Although wishing to go to bed, Capt. Rodak and his teammates did not wish to seem discourteous, so they appeared, although they already had eaten.

It was interesting to watch the boys as they first met. Not speaking the same language, there was no general introduction and they sat in their own groups at table, where the Americans saw their opponents partake heartily of food in a manner of which Trainer Johnny Behr would not have approved.

Appraising glances were cast back and forth and the Chicagoland boys asked, "Which is my man?" and the Teutons the equivalent in their own tongue. Between courses the Germans broke into rollicking songs while their opponents looked on almost in awe at their carefreeness. Henry Rothier had forgotten his harmonica, but finally the Yanks responded with "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," "Old Black Joe," and "Sidewalks of New York." Then the Germans looked on with awe.

Shortly before 10 o'clock Capt. Rodak asked permission to leave with his men. As they left each Chicagoland boxer shook hands with his coming opponent. There were several exchanges of repartee, as when Heavyweight Duffy Dvonch said to his husky blond rival something which sounded like "Wee gates."

Although both teams had made the respective class weights, the Germans looked huskier. Perhaps it was because they were in shirt sleeves or training shirts, while the Chicagoland boys had on their street clothes until they removed their coats because of the heat.

Team spirit and confidence appeared rampant among the visitors, a band of nationals in a strange country. Chicagoland boys, on the other hand, regarded the situation more seriously until they steamed up under the influence of their own songs.

Weed in the Wind.

If I were a weed in the wind today,
I'd tumble far from the State Highway;
I'd set my course by the weathercock
Through oozy slough and lone hillock.
I'd play with the foals in a fallow lot
And startle the cattle as likely as not.
Then on! Away! Over valley and hill
Yes, I should be gay if a weed were I
Alone on the loose with the wind and sky.
With nothing to hold me, no bonds to stay,

TILDEN DISPLAYS TEMPERAMENT IN BEATING BURKE

William T. Tilden II. defeated Albert Burke, French champion, yesterday to enter the semi-finals of the United States professional tennis tournament at the South Shore Country club.

Tilden flashed brilliant tennis as he scored continually with corner placements and exhibited perfectly functioning forehand drives. The American, however, cut loose with a show of temperament that attracted far more attention from the 1,000 galleryites than his tennis.

Tilden, claiming that Burke had served when he was not prepared to receive, first drew the wrath of the crowd. From then on spectators reserved applause for Burke. When the demonstration for Big Bill's opponent became more and more noticeable, Tilden served notice on Referee Fred LaPell that he would not finish the match unless the stands became silent.

Tilden Carries On.

Tilden completed the remaining games of the final set and after a nip and tuck battle, with Burke once having the score at set point, finished the matter in straight sets.

Karel Kozeluh advanced to the semi-finals by defeating Emmet Pare in a four set match, 6-2, 8-6, 3-6, 6-3. Kozeluh hugged the base line throughout the encounter, despite Pare's efforts to force him to the net. Pare, unsuccessful in this effort, could not reach the fore court himself and went down in a maze of placement.

Nusslein Meets Barnes.

Hans Nusslein and Bruce Barnes meet today to complete the semi-final bracket. Doubles matches will complete the afternoon's card.

Nusslein and Roman Najuch won the lone doubles encounter on yesterday's card, eliminating Emmet Pare and Charles Wood, 6-2, 9-7, 6-3.

A Dixmoor motorcycle policeman yesterday tried to explain in court the fine points of "fixable" or "nonfixable" speeding tickets. He also admitted that the town of Dixmoor will take any sort of collateral as bail, including cases of eggs. There were hints during the proceedings that the police would even hold a motorist's trousers as security for his appearance in court.

JOSEPH H. BRAUN.

J. H. Walden, 6901 Oglesby avenue, president of Chicago Printers, Inc., was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Charles Rajsl. He was charged by Policeman Frank Delmagio with speeding. Walden was represented by Joseph H. Braun, general counsel for the Chicago Motor club, which is waging a war against speed traps in suburban towns.

Gets "Nonfixable" Ticket.

"I notice that this ticket for the arrest of Mr. Walden has 'No Fix' written across it," said Attorney Braun. "What does that mean?"

"That means it's pretty hard to fix the ticket," responded Policeman Delmagio.

"When there is no notation of 'No Fix' on the ticket, what then?" asked the lawyer.

"Well, those tickets can be fixed," said the policeman. "But even the ones with 'No Fix' on them can be taken care of."

"Do you ever take anything but cash for bail?" he asked the policeman.

"Never," said Delmagio.

Case of Eggs for Bail.

"I don't know," said Delmagio. "They were taken to the garage and that's the last I heard of them."

Here Justice Rajsl interrupted the discussion, saying:

EXTRA FARE TRAINS FROM CHICAGO AND NEW YORK APPROVED

Washington, D. C., July 27.—[Special.]—Operation of extra fare passenger trains between Chicago and New York and other cities was approved today by the interstate commerce commission.

"The great body of extra fare travel," said the commission, "is between New York and Chicago, over the lines of the New York Central and the Pennsylvania. There is now adequate nonextra fare through service between New York and Chicago, the fastest time of the nonextra fare trains being twenty-one hours, on which there was formerly an extra fare of $8.40."

The railroads pleaded with the commission not to eliminate all extra fares. The Pennsylvania in 1928 obtained net extra fare revenue of $2,562,951 and the New York Central $3,286,128.

The Chicago Association of Commerce claimed that under the extra fare adjustment in effect prior to April 24, 1932, Chicago suffered because extra fares to and from St. Louis were relatively lower than those between Chicago and New York. The commission said any such result was removed by discontinuance of all extra fare trains to and from St. Louis April 24.

Superior service is the chief justification for extra fares, the commission said.

SAYS U. S. CASH NOW READY FOR BUILDING GROUPS

Sabath Promises All Red Tape Will Be Cut.

BY AL CHASE.

All building and loan associations desiring temporary financial relief will be aided without delay, according to an announcement made yesterday by Congressman A. J. Sabath. A long conference was held by him and representatives of the Cook county building and loan associations with H. P. Preston, agency manager for the Reconstruction Finance corporation in this district.

"We've been assured by Mr. Preston that he'll eliminate all red tape possible, as well as all unnecessary expense, and hurry action on all applications of building and loan associations," said Mr. Sabath.

"We find building and loan associations are solvent and in good condition, but in need of ready cash. For the thousands of their small property owners and shareholders, many of whom have been out of employment for over a year, this action will be a great benefit, as the associations will be able to extend mortgages and payments.

"In many instances it'll help the property owners and shareholders secure loans from the building and loan associations against their stock in order to pay their taxes.

"The Reconstruction Finance corporation has had the power and the authority to make loans to the building and loan associations, but for some reason the granting of loans to these agencies has been unnecessarily delayed."

Another "Capitol" Committee.

Halsey, Stuart & Co. announced last night that a bondholders' protective committee already has been working on the Capitol building bond issue ever since it defaulted its May interest. Last Monday THE TRIBUNE reported the formation of a second bondholders' protective committee, headed by Evan Evans, vice president of the Lundoff-Bicknell company. In the announcement of this rival committee no mention was made of the earlier bondholders' body, and it was assumed that it had the field to itself.

The chairman of the original committee, which states it already has 44 per cent of the bonds of the Capitol building deposited with it, is Joseph Solari, secretary of the Peabody Coal company. The other members are: Henry A. Engel, secretary and treasurer of Hoagland, Allum & Tunney, and Winthrop H. Smith, director of the Fidelity Investment association of Wheeling, W. Va. Kinney Smith is secretary and Halsey, Stuart & Co. are acting as depositary.

Will Deposit Rentals.

Mr. Solari states that the committee is seeking to work out some method whereby a receivership can be avoided. Arrangements are now being concluded by the committee for the building corporation and counsel for the committee to transfer and delivery of the net rentals to the First Union Trust and Savings bank, trustee of the bond issue.

Mr. Evans has on the rival committee the following: Timothy A. Ryan, S. Charles Iversen, and L. M. Willis. W. W. Daviess is secretary. It was announced that this committee was formed at the request of interests owning $1,289,000 of the bonds.

Form New Committee.

Formation of a bondholders' protective committee to reorganize approximately $2,000,000 defaulted real estate bonds underwritten by the Cottage Grove State bank has been announced. The committee consists of: J. Milton Trainer, realtor and builder; Robert B. Upham, former vice president of the Peoples Trust and Savings bank; Loren D. Sexauer, realtor, and Frank C. Mayne Jr., former bank examiner and receiver for the Cottage Grove State bank.

James Hayes, secretary, has opened an office in the bank building, 7527 Cottage Grove avenue, where bondholders can obtain information and any service desired, it is announced.

Straus Lawyer Answers Attack.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 27.—All charges made by Reuben S. Adler, bondholder, in a suit based on the default of the bonds of the Hotel Madison, were denied in an answer filed today in Supreme court by counsel for S. W. Straus & Co., who placed the securities on the market.

Adler had asked the Supreme court to halt reorganization under the auspices of the Straus firm and to compel the bankers to furnish him with a list of the property's bondholders. He asked also that deposits of bonds with S. W. Straus & Co. be nullified. Adler had alleged that the Straus committee had concealed from the bondholders that the property had long been in arrears of taxes and principal before last autumn, when the bankers announced an impending default and asked for the deposit of bonds. The denial of this and other charges was filed by Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett as attorneys for the Straus company.

Argument on the Adler motion was heard last week, when similar denials were placed upon the court record. No decision has as yet been handed down in the matter, however. Adler owns $2,000 of a total issue of $3,100,000 bonds of the hotel property. He is listed as vice chairman of the protective committee, headed by Vere Brown, which interests itself also in other bond issues placed on the market by the defendant company.

HIGHER PRICES CALLED SIGN OF BUSINESS GAIN

Stocks, Cattle and Grains Advance.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Wheat rose sharply, scoring advances of from 2⅛@2⅝c per bu Corn closed 1@1¾c, and oats and rye made substantially larger gains.

Cattle prices were up. Prime steers at $9.75 equalled the year's previous high mark and were 50c above the levels last year at this time. The average cost of live cattle has gained 49 per cent in two months. Hogs were rapidly regaining the ground lost during the hot wave and were 44 per cent over the low point this year. Cotton made gains, although the improvement was not as great as had been expected.

Stocks Also Higher.

While the commodity markets throughout the country were display ing some old time spirit, the security markets were not far behind.

On the New York stock exchange there were numerous gains of from 1 to 3 or more points among leading issues. THE TRIBUNE stock averages showed an advance of 2.06 points for fifty stocks, the 25 industrials moving ahead 3.31 points and the 25 railroads gaining .80 of a point. Heavy buying occurred in the stocks of farm equipment manufacturers and public utilities.

In the bond market there was some irregularity during the day, but averages were higher at the close, all of the United States treasury loans moving to new highs for the year.

Best Action of Year.

All in all, yesterday's action in commodity and securities markets represented the best demonstration of the year so far.

Coincident with this market improvement there were a number of encouraging developments in business, indicating that price gains might have been based on something substantial.

Output of electric power throughout the nation last week showed a moderate gain over the preceding week at 1,433,993,000 kilowatt hours, and was 13.1 per cent below the corresponding week of 1931, according to a report for the industry released yesterday. In the preceding week a loss of 13.9 per cent as compared with 1931 had been recorded.

Electricity output for the Chicago district for the week ended July 23 was only 11 per cent below the 1931 level, compared with a 12.2 per cent deficiency in the preceding week.

In the long depressed iron and steel industry the opinion is becoming more widespread that fundamental conditions are favorable for a turn. Reports of good crops and strengthening of prices for farm products are raising hopes for early betterment in the steel business.

Heavy Steel Scrap Lighter.

Heavy melting steel scrap, price movements of which are sometimes regarded as a good index of general business, has advanced 50 cents a ton at Chicago, the first rise in that market since January, 1931, says the Iron Age. The increase is the result of offers from Canada and prospective buying by a domestic mill.

There has been an advance of 50 cents a ton on turnings at Pittsburgh, and the entire scrap market is reported to have a firm undertone.

Steel ingot output stays at last week's level of 16 per cent of capacity. Idleness of two rail mills in the Chicago district resulted in a slight loss here, but there was a small gain at Pittsburgh.

"Harware, drug, and electrical supply sales exceeded those of May by 10, 1, and 4 per cent, respectively, contrary to the usual trend," says the review.

Grocery Trade Improves.

An expansion of 8 per cent was shown over May in the June wholesale grocery trade, but the review explains that this was due to the seasonal trend.

The decline of 4 per cent from the preceding month in June department store sales of the seventh federal reserve district represented about the average recession for the period, although conditions varied in different cities. Chicago trade, for example, totaled less than one-half of 1 per cent smaller than in May, but Milwaukee sales decreased 6 per cent, and Detroit showed a drop of 8½ per cent.

The retail shoe trade expanded 5 per cent in June. This was the fourth consecutive monthly gain and represented a little more than the usual seasonal increase over May.

Bank closings throughout the nation for the week ended at noon yesterday were 33 per cent less than in the preceding week, according to weekly bank bulletin of Rand McNally & Co. The weekly average for July is 27 per cent under the weekly average for the year to date, and 46 per cent under the weekly average for 1931. Four new and reopened banks were reported for the week.

Stockholders Hailed as Aid Getting Trade

BY SCRUTATOR.

More and more the big American manufacturing and merchandising concerns are realizing and utilizing the power and influence of their many thousands of stockholders. Not only is every stockholder a potential customer but he also is a potential salesman for a company's products, and the more so because he has a financial interest in his company's success.

Moreover, the big companies recently have awakened to the political power vested in their stockholders. Thus, a number of concerns have enlisted their stockholders in the fight against excessive national, state, and local taxation and also against various radical legislative proposals.

The stockholders have received letters from the chairmen or presidents of their companies explaining in exact terms and figures what tax levies and proposed laws really mean and how they affect the individual and the company.

Form Line of Defense.

If our system of democratic government and capitalistic trade and industry are threatened, as the radicals boast, what could be better policy for big concerns than to make strong allies of their stockholders, who themselves are small capitalists and usually, taken as a group, represent majority ownership of the businesses?

Along this line, a letter sent to every new stockholder by the General Motors corporation, largest of the publicly owned automobile companies, is illustrative. It is signed by President Alfred P. Sloan Jr., and it follows rather quickly every transfer of the company's stock to a new stockholder.

"I take this opportunity of welcoming you as a stockholder of General Motors corporation—a public institution owned by approximately 360,000 people," Mr. Sloan says. "This extensive ownership of a large industry is one of many evidences of public confidence in a business of which you are now a part owner. To be of value, in any large way, this new relationship should be mutually profitable, and I believe and hope that it will.

"You will receive, from time to time, information in regard to the policies, the financial position and the products of the corporation. This will place you in a position to discuss General Motors' activities with your friends and acquaintances and give us the benefit of your suggestions and comments.

Other Large Interests.

"While General Motors is engaged primarily in the manufacture of automotive vehicles, the diversified activities of the corporation of which you are now a stockholder include automatic refrigerators, radio equipment, farm lighting plants, airplanes, gas-electric locomotives, Diesel engines, and a wide variety of automotive parts, accessories, and equipment.

"There are General Motors dealers or representatives in your community and we trust that you will give these local business men first consideration when in the market for products such as we manufacture. As General Motors is building for the future, your confidence and patronage are valuable corporation assets, which will have a growing effect upon our permanence and prosperity in years to come. Please feel at liberty to write me personally at any time."

Accompanying the letter is information when the directors will meet to consider quarterly dividends and the dates when stockholders may expect to receive any dividends declared.

Numerous other companies send out similar letters but we have yet to see one that is better designed to gain the confidence and coöperation of stockholders.

ATLANTIC LINERS WILL KEEP LOW RATES OF FARE

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, July 27.—After an exhaustive discussion of the effects of the new low rates instituted several months ago, the North Atlantic steamship conference decided today before it closed its two day meeting here to retain them indefinitely.

The French line alone favored increasing fares. This line, which commissioned its new de luxe cabin liner Champlain in its Havre-New York service this summer and which expects to complete a 70,000 ton superliner next year, maintained that the low rates had not encouraged ocean travel as their advocates had promised they would.

Representatives of the Cunard, however, argued that the tourist movement to Europe this year was greater than last year, notwithstanding the depression. The British and American companies said that the lower priced accommodations, particularly reduced tourist and third class fares, had proved immensely attractive this year.

Thomas B. Hogan, for the last four years vice president and general manager of the Chicago Yellow Cab company, was elected president of the company yesterday by its board of directors. He will continue his duties as general manager.

Mr. Moore shortly will be elected president of one of the important Middle West subsidiaries, it was announced.

PUBLIC OFFERS 3 BILLIONS FOR TREASURY NOTES

Bids 12 Times Value of the Issue.

Washington, D. C., July 27.—(AP)—An immnse oversubscription to the offer of treasury securities to raise funds to finance the expanded operations of the Reconstruction Finance corporation was announced tonight by Secretary Mills.

The secretary said the four year treasury notes bearing 3¼ per cent interest had been oversubscribed 12 times. Where the treasury wished to raise $325,000,000, the public offered to buy $3,803,000,000 of the notes. The $325,000,000 offering of two year 2½ per cent notes brought total subscriptions of more than $1,703,000,000.

Far Over Subscribed.

The issues, the first securities sold by the treasury in the 1933 fiscal year, except minor turn over paper, thus brought in a total of more than $5,500,000,000, whereas the treasury wished to raise only $650,000,000, of which $238,000,000 is to be used to retire maturing certificates of indebtedness. The issues will be dated Aug. 1.

The oversubscription, greater than an in recent years, was attributed by financial experts chiefly to the subscriptions from banks which have the largest cash reserves in their history. It was pointed out that the banks are anxious to find safe investments for their money, and it was believed probable many of them had subscribed for several times the amount they really hoped to obtain, thus boosting the total subscription.

For Reconstruction.

The 412 million dollars remaining of the 650 million, which will be sold by the treasury, will be used for government expenditures, chiefly those of the Reconstruction Finance corporation which will require immediate funds to begin its increased work of aiding the country recover from the present financial and economic situation.

The secretary did not announce the total allotment and said the decision as to just how much would be allotted would be reached later.

ACTIVE BUYING BOOSTS PRICE OF WHEAT IN PIT

Sells at Highest Figure in More than Month.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat sold at the highest price yesterday in over a month as the result of enthusiastic buying of futures headed by houses with eastern and foreign connections. Pronounced strength in English and Canadian markets, with less favorable Canadian and foreign crop reports and rumors of large export sales, combined to inbrease bullish sentiment.

The prospective improvement in general economic conditions, as reflected in the action of securities of late, has had considerable influence in increasing confidence on the part of buyers, and there was no material pressure on the way up.

July wheat, which sold at 44¼c 10 days ago, touched 50c on the upturn and sold at the best figure since June 17, while September at 51⅞c was the highest since July 6. A small break early, due to profit taking, was followed by a wave of buying, and outside trade broadened materially on the way up despite the sharp bulge which has occurred from the low of last week. Profit taking and selling against offers checked the upturn, but the finish was within a fraction of the top, with net gains of 2⅛@2⅜c. July finished at 50c; September, 51⅛@51⅝c, and December, 54⅜@54¾c.

Winnipeg Market Strong.

Winnipeg wheat again showed pronounced strength and closed 1⅝@2⅛c higher, with October at 61⅝c in Canadian funds, and prices were the highest since June 4. Liverpool surprised the trade by closing ⅜@1¼c higher, with October at 54⅞c, the best figure since early in June. The upturn in the English market was in the face of increased offerings from Russia, but a bullish construction was placed on the dominion government weekly crop summary issued late Tuesday.

Readjustment has apparently been under way of late between Chicago and other markets as Liverpool October has gained around ⅝c on Chicago September. Winnipeg October at the time Liverpool closed was 10⅛c over the local market against 8⅞c on July 19, taking the blackboard figures.

Rumored Large Export Sales.

Rumors were current during the day that as high as 4,000,000 bu Manitoba wheat had been sold for export, but this was presumably a reflection of charters made for that amount of grain from the head of the lakes to Montreal, and was regarded as replacing wheat sold for shipment from Montreal of late. There have been persistent intimations that the export business has been well in excess of the amounts claimed at the seaboard.

Spreaders have been active in buying wheat futures at Chicago and selling at Winnipeg and Minneapolis in the last few days. According to people who should be in a position to know there has been more general buying of wheat recently than for some time past, and in part this is attributed to the strong stand taken by the Board of Trade against the government edict that the exchange should bow to its rulings.

Unfavorable crop comments continue to come from the Canadian northwest and the forecast for fair and warmer when rain is badly needed had some effect on sentiment at Winnipeg. Harvesting is well under way in the American northwest, with conditions decidedly spotted. Crop Observer George M. Le Count reported a spotted outlook in North Dakota, while Donovan wired that Manitoba had a prospect of a good average yield.

Danubian Wheat Crop Short.

European import requirements of wheat for the 1932-'33 season are expected to equal or exceed those of the previous season, according to cables from abroad. The Danubian countries have a prospective yield of around 110,000,000 bu less than last year, and only about sufficient for home requirements. During the 1931-'32 season clearances were around 60,000,000 bu, about half of which represented rail shipments.

Corn was dull and easy early, reflecting rains in Illinois and Indiana, but turned strong later with wheat and closed 1@1⅜c higher, with shorts covering freely on the way up. July finished at 32¼c; September, 32¾@32⅞c, and December, 33½c. No foreign demand for mixed and yellow corn was in evidence but there have been scattered sales of white for some weeks, presumably to France, which normally draws its supply from South Africa. The latter, however, refuses to permit exportation of corn testing over 12.5 per cent moisture, and the new crop is still too damp to meet the government requirements. The country sold 115,000 bu old corn to arrive.

Cash oats were in much better demand. Local handlers reported 265,000 bu sold for shipment, but there were intimations that sales were materially in excess of this figure. Fair sales of Manitobas and also Texas red oats were claimed for export with the continent the buyer. Futures closed ⅝@⅞c higher, with July, 17½c; September, 18c, and December, 20½@20⅝c.

BUTTER FUTURES EASIER

Lack of support developed in the butter and egg futures markets on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange yesterday, butter easing ¾c and eggs ¾c in a dull session. While butter storage and production news was somewhat bullish, there was little tendency to support the November delivery. The four markets reported a very light storage movement, the shortage increasing 330,000 lbs. The Land o' Lakes reported production 12.6 per cent less than last year. Egg news was less favorable, the movement in the four markets reducing the shortage 12,000 cases. Selling was only moderate, but there was little support apparent. Sales: Butter, 22 cars; eggs, 14 cars. Deliveries: Butter, 1 car. Prices follow:

MEN.

PERMANENT, IMMEDIATE POSITIONS ARE AVAILABLE AT OUR WEST SIDE BRANCH OFFICE TO MEN WHO ARE QUALIFIED TO LEARN HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY REPRESENT THIS COMPANY.

These positions pay $5,000, $6,000, $7,000, $10,000 and more a year regularly to men who learn how to do this work successfully.

1931 was our biggest year, but 1932 will be our third consecutive record sales year. The reasons for this unique success are that our men are taught in a practical manner how to do this work, they are honorably treated, our product is revolutionary in its service superiority that it is changing the course of an entire industry, and the present and potential market is absolutely unlimited.

The product itself reveals a picture which the prospect can never forget, and an inimitable method of presenting it is now being introduced with dramatic effect. Applying this method of work, R. C. Allen, a former auto salesman, who started in our West Side branch office nearly 4 months ago, earned $650 last month. For one recent week's business he had a profit of over $140; that same week, James Novotny, formerly in the grocery business, earned over $115, while a former refrigerator salesman earned $90 and a former chauffeur earned $225 that same week.

So effective is the proven demonstration of this product that Albert M. Knapp, a former salesman of engineering equipment, averaged $47 per week his first six weeks, but the next week he earned $112.

Throughout the entire country men are making more than they ever made before as clerks, salesmen, bookkeepers, mechanics, engineers, etc., due to the amazing and compelling value they can offer the Electrolux product (not refrigeration).

The work is not "easy," yet it is not difficult. Average men master it when they set their minds to it and really study and practice to acquire skill. Immediate earnings to more than meet your living expenses are available to men who learn how to do the work successfully and apply themselves earn regularly from $5,000 to $12,000 per year.

If you are qualified to learn this work, the opportunity is permanent and unlimited. There is no investment, no deposit, no charge for instruction. For positions in our West Side branch apply Thursday morning, 9:30 to 12, 327-333 Madison-Kedzie Bldg., 9 S. Kedzie-av.
